

CONGRESS WILL PASS WAR MEASURE TODAY

House to Follow Senate Example After Members Give Expression to Patriotic Impulses--Senate Gave Overwhelming Majority.

By Telegram to The Freeman.

Washington, April 5.—The final act utilizing the power of congress to accept the German war challenge was staged today. With the senate on record, by the overwhelming vote of 82 to 6, proclaiming a state of war and pledging all of the men and money power of the nation to fight it to a successful conclusion, the house took up the war resolution as soon as it met today. A vote will be reached before adjournment, the leaders hope. That it will be overwhelmingly for war was conceded by the anti-war faction.

It was extremely unlikely that there would be 25 votes cast in opposition. But the leaders intended permitting the same freedom of debate which marked yesterday's proceedings in the senate. The patriotic addresses made there must have a telling effect in Germany, officials say, and they want the house placed on record in the same manner in order that the statements now being circulated in the Teutonic nations that the great bulk of Americans are opposed to the president's position may be refuted in the strongest manner.

Senate Vote Was 82 to 6.

The war resolution was passed by the senate last night by a vote of 82 to 6. Senators who cast the negative votes were Gronna, of North Dakota; LaFollette, of Wisconsin; Norris, of Nebraska; Lane, of Oregon; Stone, of Missouri; and Vandeman, of Mississippi.

The resolution, drafted after consultation with the state department and already accepted by the house committee, says that the state of war exists upon the German declaration of war against the United States by Germany in violation of the laws of nations and the rights of the United States.

LaFollette is Denounced.

Action in the senate came just after 11 o'clock at the close of a debate that had lasted continuously since 10 a. m. yesterday. The climax was reached late in the afternoon when Senator John Sharp Williams denounced a speech by Senator LaFollette as more worthy of Herr von Bethmann-Hollweg than of an American senator.

The passage of the resolution was not marked by any outburst from the galleries and on the floor the senators themselves were unusually grave and quiet.

Drove Horse Into Trolley.

Wednesday evening about 8 o'clock, John Miller of New Paltz, drove his horse and rig across the car track on the Broadway hill directly in front of an oncoming trolley car. At the time the trolley was on its way down the hill and Miller was driving up. The motorman rang his bell repeatedly and shut off the power and when the car struck the horse it was moving at a slow speed. The horse was knocked down and the wagon wrecked. Miller escaped uninjured, but the horse was bruised and lamed by the accident. Sergeant Hanley and Policeman Boyd happened to be on the trolley car at the time and they state that the accident was due to no fault of the trolley motorman. The wrecked wagon was still standing on the Broadway hill today. If the motorman had not had his car under control there would have been a serious accident.

POLISH ALLIANCE TO RAISE AN ARMY

By Telegram to The Freeman.

Pittsburgh, Pa., April 5.—An army of 100,000 men is to be raised by the Polish Alliance of America and placed at the disposal of the United States. Dr. T. R. Starynski, national president of the Alliance, which has just concluded a four-days session here, today telegraphed President Wilson tendering the services of this army and expressing the sincere admiration of the Alliance "for the supremely noble humanitarian spirit which is dictating all your words and acts."

"This army," the telegram says "composed of men whose forefathers had inscribed the words 'For our liberty and yours on their banners, will gladly follow the American flag in the sublime fight for liberty and justice for all nations and for democratic freedom for mankind. Polish people only ask and hope that the government, considering the glorious ties binding their ancestry with this country of ours, allow the fighting force to bear the name of Kosciuszko's Army."

FRENCH LOOK FOR OUR ARMY IN FALL

By Telegram to The Freeman.

Paris, April 5.—The expectation that the autumn of 1917 will see United States soldiers fighting on French soil for the first time in history reigned strong here today. In every circle expressions of cordiality for the United States and laudatory words for President Wilson are heard. From the highest officials of the government to the peasantry this same spirit exists.

Premier Ribot was asked if he expected American troops. His face lighted up as he exclaimed with emphasis:

"We shall be glad to see the Stars and Stripes alongside the tricolor. We will welcome with all our hearts any assistance that the United States gives us."

Paul Deschanel, president of the senate, said:

"I am indeed happy to see America join the allies and help us fight the cause of democracy and enlightenment."

He pointed that President Wilson's words have moved France profoundly. A national celebration to celebrate America's entry into the war is being planned.

SOCIAL WORKER TO TELL OF TRAFFIC

By Telegram to The Freeman.

Miss Rose Livingston, "Angel of Chinatown," to speak at Y. M. C. A. Next Wednesday Evening.

Rose Livingston of New York, who is scheduled to speak in the Kingston Y. M. C. A. building Wednesday evening, April 11, at 8 o'clock, calls herself a social worker, but in New York she is better known as the "Angel of Chinatown," because of her wonderful work for the past nine years in reclaiming the unfortunate victims of commercialized vice in that portion of the metropolis bounded by Pell and Doyer streets. There is no use to disclaim the existence of white slavery in Rose Livingston's presence. She knows. Moreover the story she tells has been thoroughly investigated and is vouched for by prominent New Yorkers.

"The girl who disappears" is not a myth and Rose Livingston has accumulated proofs of that fact during her work in New York's underworld, as convincing as they are terrible. She has traced many of these unfortunate to the evil resorts of New York and Brooklyn and sometimes alone—sometimes with the help of the police and city detectives—she has rescued them.

She does not try to reach hardened cases. Her work is among the little girls. Time and again she has been able to find a child who has been abducted and restored her to her relatives and friends before the dreadful blight awaiting her has fallen.

Miss Livingston will be accompanied by Mrs. Florence Maule Updegraff of Woodstock, who will speak on "What Women Can Do."

ALL BRONY LEFT WAS PARTING NOTE

By Telegram to The Freeman.

While Rooming With Three Chums in Bridgeport, Conn., Koslowsky Skipped With Their Belongings—Held For Extradition.

Brony Koslowsky, 18 years old, was arrested on the Strand on Wednesday evening by Sergeant Hanley at the request of the authorities of Bridgeport, Conn., where Brony is wanted on a charge of theft. This morning when he was arraigned before Recorder Lang on a charge of being a fugitive from justice the court remanded him to jail for ten days to await the arrival of the Bridgeport officer with extradition papers.

According to the letter received by Chief Wood some time ago Brony was rooming with three other young fellows and skipped out with all their belongings, valued at about $125. In fact all Brony left was a note stating he was on his way to Texas. This was in January, and since that time the local police have had their eyes open for Brony, but he was evidently wise to the fact he was wanted for he kept out of sight.

Brony was considerably taken aback when he ran into Sergeant Hanley's arms on the street and was placed under arrest.

This morning when questioned by Recorder Lang he said that the clothing he had taken did not amount to the sum named, and added that all he got for it was $10. He did not take a cent in money, he said.

Brony has been in trouble before. In January of 1915 he was arrested with Frank Van Steenburgh, the frog bug, who is serving time in prison, another young fellow on a charge of stealing furs from the Werblow's warehouse on Meadow street. He has also served time for shooting craps. Brony, judging from his past record, is a bad egg but comes of a respectable family.

In default of $1,000 bail he was remanded to the county jail today to await extradition.

U. S. NOW HAILED AS ONE OF ALLIES

By Telegram to The Freeman.

Enthusiastic Rejoicing in England and Press Comment is Laudatory—To Force Out German Fleet?

London, April 5.—The United States is already being hailed in Britain as one of the Allies.

News that the American Senate had passed the resolution declaring a state of war exists between the United States and Germany was received from Washington today and intensified the rejoicing throughout the land.

It requires only a patriotic reference to America or President Wilson in the House of Commons to bring forth cheers.

Lord Northcliffe, owner of the Times and the Daily Mail and one of the most powerful figures in private life in Great Britain, has joined with the Express in urging the United States to begin sending troops to Europe as soon as the president has signed the "state of war resolution."

The Chronicle (a morning newspaper), in commenting further upon the entry of the United States in the conflict, says that democracy is now the watchword of the war and adds that the revolution in Russia made the intervention of the United States easier.

The Chronicle article, in part, reads:

"The democracies fight now uncompromised. Their hands are free to assert without reserve the claims of human freedom, and their great Russian ally fights now with its eyes on the same goal as they."

"That this has made it easier for the United States to join us is in the very nature of its democratic action, for a people like the Americans can only put out its full effort in a cause whose ideals can fully and unreservedly square with its own."

The Westminster Gazette reports that a mission will soon go to the United States to discuss the co-operation of the United States with the Entente nations in the war. It is understood that the scope of this mission will be broad and that it will discuss financial, economic and political matters as well as military affairs.

The entry of America into the war is making its influence felt in manifold directions. Certain elements of the pacifist faction are hoping that it will induce Germany to back down and consent to peace. Many war experts predict that it will shorten the war and make victory for the Allies absolutely certain. Writers on naval affairs say that the addition of the American navy may make it possible for the British and United States fleets to force the German high seas fleet into the open for a decisive battle. Business interests believe that the wealth and resources of America will greatly benefit the credit and finances of the allied countries. Some writers on political topics see in the action of the United States a move for world democracy.

SENATE ATTESTS WAGNER'S LOYALTY

By Telegram to The Freeman.

Albany, April 5.—By the adoption of two resolutions by the senate in executive session, the Mitchell-Wagner proceedings were ended at 2:30 this morning and Senator Wagner was given a clean bill of health.

Explanations were made by several senators to the effect that they were dissatisfied with the sudden termination of matters and nothing but the war situation should have ended them. Senator Elton R. Brown, leader of the Republicans, however, declared that as nothing in the evidence had reflected upon the honor or patriotism of Senator Wagner that it was time the subject be dropped in consequence.

After nearly six hours in executive session, the senate adopted the following resolution by a vote of 39 to 13:

"Whereas, John Purroy Mitchel, upon his appearance and examination before the bar of the senate, has disclaimed that he intended to impeach or assail the loyalty and patriotism of Senator Robert F. Wagner and thereby has disposed of the questions to be determined in those proceedings;

"And whereas, the evidence shows that the negotiations by the United States government to acquire land at Rockaway Point for fortification purposes were pending more than one year prior to the request for legislation, and

"Whereas, said land has this day been acquired by the state of New York for the benefit of the United States by legislation duly enacted;

"Resolved, that the pending proceedings be terminated."

This second resolution was also adopted, the vote being unanimous:

"Resolved, that the senate takes this occasion to again unanimously express its confidence in the honorable discharge of his duty as a senator of Senator Wagner and in his loyalty to his country and patriotism as a citizen."

FRENCH LOOK FOR OUR ARMY IN FALL

Paris, April 5.—The expectation that the autumn of 1917 will see United States soldiers fighting on French soil for the first time in history reigned strong here today. In every circle expressions of cordiality for the United States and laudatory words for President Wilson are heard. From the highest officials of the government to the peasantry this same spirit exists.

SOCIAL WORKER TO TELL OF TRAFFIC

Miss Rose Livingston, "Angel of Chinatown," to speak at Y. M. C. A. Next Wednesday Evening. Rose Livingston of New York, who is scheduled to speak in the Kingston Y. M. C. A. building Wednesday evening, April 11, at 8 o'clock, calls herself a social worker, but in New York she is better known as "Angel of Chinatown," because of her wonderful work for the past nine years in reclaiming the unfortunate victims of commercial vice in that portion of the metropolis bounded by Pell and Doyer streets. There is no use to disclaim the existence of white slavery in Rose Livingston's presence. She knows. Moreover the story she tells has been thoroughly investigated and is vouched for by prominent New Yorkers.

"The girl who disappears" is not a myth and Rose Livingston has accumulated proofs of that fact during her work in New York's underworld, as convincing as they are terrible. She has traced many of these unfortunate to the evil resorts of New York and Brooklyn and sometimes alone—sometimes with the help of the police and city detectives—she has rescued them.

She does not try to reach hardened cases. Her work is among the little girls. Time and again she has been able to find a child who has been abducted and restored her to her relatives, and friends before the dreadful night awaiting her had fallen.

Miss Livingston will be accompanied by Mrs. Florence Maule Updegraff of Woodstock, who will speak on "What Women Can Do."

STONE RIDGE.

Stone Ridge, April 5.—"Uncle Tom's Cabin" will be given in the Grange Hall on Saturday evening, April 7. Admission, 15 and 25 cents.

The banquet given in the Grange Hall on Tuesday evening in honor of the local basketball teams, was thoroughly enjoyed by everyone present. The management deserved great credit for the beautiful dinner served. The menu included the following: Blue points on the half shell, soup, chicken, mashed potatoes, gravy, salad, olives, pickles, cheese, color, ice cream, cake and coffee.

The dinner favors were carnations and ferns. About one hundred guests were present. Miller's orchestra furnished music for dancing. Regular Grange meeting on Friday evening, April 6.

Dr. James Coles of Ellenville has moved to the Cantina farm. Frank Bishop entertained about fifty friends at progressive euchre on Monday evening.

Don't forget to keep Tuesday evening, April 17 free. The play "Uncle Jack" will be given by local talent on that date in the Grange Hall. The proceeds will be for the benefit of the M. E. Church. Admission, etc., will be announced later.

Rev. Channock N. Stevens has purchased an automobile. James Lounsberry has the German measles.

Rev. J. J. Shaffer will give an illustrated lecture in the Reformed Church on Sunday evening, April 8. This lecture will be given at 6:45 and will take the place of the C. E. prayer meeting. The choir will render an Easter cantata at 7:30 o'clock, the time of the regular church services.

COTTEKILL.

Cottekill, April 5.—Easter exercises will be held at the M. E. Church on Sunday evening. A. J. Keator, who has been ill for the past week, is greatly improved at this writing.

ALL BRONY LEFT WAS PARTING NOTE

While Rooming With Three Chums in Bridgeport, Conn., Kostowsky Skipped With Their Belongings— Held For Extradition. Brony Kostowsky, 18 years old, was arrested on the Strand on Wednesday evening by Sergeant Hanley at the request of the authorities of Bridgeport, Conn., where Brony is wanted on a charge of theft. This morning when he was arraigned before Recorder Lang on a charge of being a fugitive from justice the court remanded him to jail for ten days to await the arrival of the Bridgeport officer with extradition papers.

According to the letter received by Chief Wood some time ago Brony was rooming with three other young fellows and skipped out with all their belongings, valued at about $125. In fact all Brony left was a note stating he was on his way to Texas. This was in January, and since that time the local police have had their eyes open for Brony, but he was evidently wise to the fact he was wanted for he kept out of sight.

Brony was considerably taken aback when he ran into Sergeant Hanley's arms on the street and was placed under arrest.

This morning when questioned by Recorder Lang he said that the clothing he had taken did not amount to the sum named, and added that all he got for it was $10. He did not take a cent in money, he said.

Brony has been in trouble before. In January of 1915 he was arrested with Frank Van Steenburgh, the fire bug, who is serving time in prison, another young fellow on a charge of stealing furs from the Wordalowsky warehouse on Meadow street. He has also served time for shooting a carp. Brony, judging from his past record, is a bad egg but comes of a respectable family.

In default of $1,000 bail he was remanded to the county jail today to await extradition.

U. S. NOW HAILED AS ONE OF ALLIES

"State of War" Resolution Arouses Enthusiastic Rejoicing in England and Press Comment is Laudatory.—To Force Out German Fleet? By Telegram to The Freeman. London, April 5.—The United States is already being hailed in Britain as one of the Allies. News that the American Senate had passed the resolution declaring a state of war exists between the United States and Germany was received from Washington today and intensified the rejoicing throughout the land.

It requires only a patriotic reference to America or President Wilson in the House of Commons to bring forth cheers.

Lord Northcliffe, owner of the Times and the Daily Mail and one of the most powerful figures in private life in Great Britain, has joined with the Express in urging the United States to begin sending troops to Europe as soon as the president has signed the "state of war resolution" in order to show the unity of all the nations that are fighting the German Allies.

The newspapers take occasion to amplify their praise of the action taken in the American Congress, the evening editions devoting much space to laudatory articles on the overwhelming vote by which the "state of war resolution" passed the American Senate.

The Chronicle (a morning newspaper), in commenting further upon the entry of the United States in the conflict, says that democracy is now the watchword of the war and adds that the revolution in Russia made the intervention of the United States easier.

The Chronicle article, in part, reads: "The democracies fight now uncompromised. Their hands are free to assert without reserve the claims of human freedom, and their great Russian ally fights now with his eyes on the same goal as they."

"That this has made it easier for the United States to join us is in the very nature of its democratic action, for a people like the Americans can only put out its full effort in a cause whose ideals can fully and unreservedly square with its own."

The Westminster Gazette reports that a mission will soon go to the United States to discuss the cooperation of the United States with the Entente nations in the war. It is understood that the scope of this mission will be broad and that it will discuss financial, economic and political matters as well as military affairs.

The entry of America into the war is making its influence felt in manifold directions. Certain elements of the pacifist faction are hoping that it will induce Germany to back down and consent to peace. Many war experts predict that it will shorten the war and make victory for the Allies absolutely certain. Writers on naval affairs say that the addition of the American navy may make it possible for the British and United States fleets to force the German high seas fleet out in the open for a decisive battle. Business interests believe that the wealth and resources of America will greatly benefit the credit and finances of the allied countries. Some writers on political topics see in the action of the United States a move for world democracy.

FINAN FORCED TO LEAVE CITY

Found Guilty of Assaulting Woman and Pays $50 Fine—Jailed If Caught in City in Six Months— His Youth Saved Him. Eugene J. Finan, 22 years old, of Clinton avenue, paid a fine of $50 in recorder's court on Wednesday afternoon, and a sentence of six months in jail was suspended provided he stays out of Kingston for that length of time. He was arrested by Sergeant Hanley on a charge of assault in the second degree on the complaint of Mrs. William Lounsberry, of the Boulevard.

He was arraigned later in the day before Recorder Lang and was represented by W. H. Grokan while Assistant District Attorney J. DePuy Haskbrouck appeared in behalf of Mrs. Lounsberry.

Finan pleaded guilty to assault in the third degree, which plea was accepted to Mrs. Lounsberry. It is said that owing to Finan's youth the Lounsberrys were willing to accept the plea for a minor offence.

The assault was one of the most daring committed in Kingston in a long time. Sergeant Hanley deserves great credit for his quick work in rounding up the assailant, as all he had to work with was the description furnished by Mrs. Lounsberry, who was not acquainted with young Finan.

Jess Willard Will Fight.

Washington, April 5.—"I will fight. When do you want me?" With this telegram, addressed to President Wilson and received at the White House today, Jess Willard, champion heavyweight pugilist of the world, offered himself to Uncle Sam. The wire was filed in Chicago.

SENATE ATTESTS WAGNER'S LOYALTY

Mayor Mitchell's Disclaimer Accepted by Upper House of Legislature and After Prolonged Executive Session, Resolutions are Adopted Ending Controversy. By Telegram to The Freeman. Albany, April 5.—By the adoption of two resolutions by the senate in executive session, the Mitchell-Wagner proceedings were ended at 2:30 this morning and Senator Wagner was given a clean bill of health.

Explanations were made by several senators to the effect that they were dissatisfied with the sudden termination of matters and nothing but the war situation should have ended them. Senator Elou R. Brown, leader of the Republicans, however, declared that as nothing in the evidence had reflected upon the honor or patriotism of Senator Wagner, that it was time the subject be dropped in consequence.

After nearly six hours in executive session, the senate adopted the following resolution by a vote of 39 to 13: "Whereas, John Purroy Mitchell, upon his appearance and examination before the bar of the senate, has disclaimed that he intended to impeach or assail the loyalty and patriotism of Senator Robert F. Wagner and thereby has disposed of the questions to be determined in these proceedings, and

"Whereas, the evidence shows that the negotiations by the United States government to acquire land at Rockaway Point for fortification purposes were pending more than one year prior to the request for legislation, and

"Whereas, said land has this day been acquired by the state of New York for the benefit of the United States by legislation duly enacted, "Resolved, that the pending proceedings be terminated."

This second resolution was also adopted, the vote being unanimous: "Resolved, that the senate takes this occasion to again unanimously express its confidence in the honorable discharge of its duty as a senator of Senator Wagner and in his loyalty to his country and patriotism as a citizen."

BELGIAN RELIEF SHIP TORPEDOED

Amsterdam, April 5.—The Belgian relief steamship Tregler, bound from New York to Rotterdam, with grain, has been sunk by a German submarine.

Six members of the crew were wounded while the submarine was shelling the ship. The members of the crew were landed today and reported the destruction of their vessel off Scheveningen.

Seamen from the Tregler said that the Germans opened fire on the ship when she was off the Dutch coast.

INCITING COLORED REVOLT.

Federal Agents Probe Alleged Activities of Germans.

By Telegram to The Freeman. New Orleans, La., April 5.—Federal authorities today continued their probe into the alleged activities of German agents toward inciting negroes to rebellion in the event of war with Germany. Several Germans are under surveillance and a few have already been taken into custody on various places on minor charges. German agents generally pose as labor agents until they gain the confidence of the negroes. It is alleged. According to the authorities, the negroes are promised complete social, economical and political equality with the whites, if they will take arms against the United States.

Freighter Wrecked at Sea.

New York, April 5.—The armed American freight steamer Zealandia has been "wrecked at sea" according to cable advices received at the offices of her owners here today. All on board were saved, the report said, but no details were given. Zealandia sailed from an Atlantic port on March 18 for a British port with a cargo of foodstuffs.

German Emperor Reported Ill.

By Telegram to The Freeman. London, April 5.—The Morning Post today printed a cablegram from its Washington correspondent stating that Emperor William is failing with Bright's disease and that death probably will occur within a few months. This information was said to be secured from German American bankers.

STREET GOSSIP ABOUT TOWN

"Well, I know what I am going to do now," said the friend to the street corner politician.

"What is that?" queried the politician.

"I am going to let Mayor Canfield appoint me a member of the board of censors to censor movie plays and public dances," said the friend with a smile.

"There is no board of censors appointed by the mayor," retorted the politician.

"Yes there is," replied the friend.

"I read about it in the paper."

"No you did not," said the politician.

"What you read was a resolution to appoint such a board which was introduced by Alderman Brown at the common council meeting on Tuesday."

"I am sure I read where the board is to be appointed," persisted the friend.

"You are like a lot of people," said the politician in a disgusted tone.

"What do you mean?" flared the friend.

"Never read anything straight in the papers," retorted the politician.

"But I did," said the friend.

"What you read," explained the politician, "was that such a motion had been introduced but had been laid on the table."

"What does that mean?" asked the friend.

"That no action will be taken in the matter until it is called up at another meeting of the city fathers," explained the politician.

"I think if a good scheme to have such a board though," argued the friend.

"I did not say it was not," replied the politician.

"What do you think of it then?" was the next query of the friend.

"Have not given it a thought," replied the politician, "but I suppose it could be done."

"Sure it could be done," argued the friend.

"I can't say I would like to have my amusements censored by some men who might be appointed to such a board though," objected the politician.

"Don't you think I would make a good censor?" asked the friend.

"Oh, well, there might be worse," retorted the politician.

"What do you think of the action of the common council in killing the Purvis ordinance?" asked the friend.

"Well," replied the politician, "judiciously. I am glad the matter is settled anyway."

"But that is not answering my question," argued the friend.

"Well, give me as much time as the common council had to give you my opinion then," retorted the politician.

"What does a violation of the agriculture law mean that I read about every so often in the papers?" asked the friend, changing the subject.

"Probably what a man does after he has planted free government seed and waited for a crop," explained the politician.

"Have you decided what you are going to plant this year?" asked the friend.

"No, can't say I have," replied the politician, "for I have been following up the present crisis too much to give thought to anything else."

"I think everybody ought to plant a garden though," argued the friend.

"Why?" asked the politician.

"Gives you a chance to show your patriotism," explained the friend.

"I am showing my patriotism without doing that though," explained the politician.

"What are you doing?" asked the friend.

"I am refraining from owning a dog that keeps the neighbors awake nights," retorted the politician.

"I don't think that is so very patriotic," argued the friend.

"If you were kept awake nights by the yowls of a neighbor's dog you would though," retorted the politician heatedly. "If I had my way," he added, "I would make it compulsory for owners having such dogs to bring them up to the city hall and let the police improve their marksmanship."

"I am glad that there are a lot of patriots in Kingston," said the friend, following a pause.

"What do you mean?" asked the politician.

"Why, anywhere you go you will find men standing when the national emblem is played," explained the friend.

"Yes," retorted the politician, "and when the call to enlist comes you will find many of the same men still standing—at home."

PREPAREDNESS THE THING.

Without It, Gardening on Vacant Lots is Useless.

Editor Kingston Daily Freeman.

I see in Tuesday's issue of The Freeman that the Chamber of Commerce has voted to adopt an agricultural plank in their platform. That is commendable and ought to be encouraged. It should lower the H. C. O. L. for a large number of families, but will it? The out door exercise will at least be beneficial. The idea seems to obtain that anybody can be a failure at anything else and then be successful as a farmer, gardener or at raising chickens. The facts are just the reverse. What would be the result if the farmer and gardener should take a year off or all crops should fail? The great war would end some other things also.

As to those vacant lots, it would be a pleasure to see them under cultivation instead of sowing the country side with weed seed. The nature of the ground about Kingston is sandy, poor and porous. The vacant lot to be productive should have a good coat of manure or some fertilizer spread broadcast and plowed or dug in deep, and another topdressing harrowed in or worked in some other way. It will take several seasons' cultivation to get city lots in condition to give best results. If the ground is not properly prepared, it is folly to waste time and seed on it.

Gardening is a gamble. The amateur will have to invest in seeds, plants, tools, insecticides, artificial watering and "keep on the job" every day until frost comes. Eternal vigilance is the price of a crop. After fifty years at gardening I find new problems to solve, something new to study every day in the year.

My idea is not to discourage anyone planning to have a garden but to make them realize that a garden well planned is half the battle.

Respectfully,

THOMAS A. STONE.

THE KITCHEN CABINET

The sea of ambition is tempest-tossed. And the hopes may vanish like foam. When sails are shivered, and compass lost. Then look to the light of home.

GOOD THINGS TO EAT.

A dish which is both wholesome and appetizing is clabbered milk. Set away a bowl of milk to sour. Chill and sprinkle with brown or maple sugar and a little nutmeg and serve in sherbet cups for dessert. Nuts with the sugar and spice may be added if more nutriment is needed to supply the menu.

Swiss Eggs.—When eggs are plentiful this is a dish we may enjoy with a clear conscience. Break an egg for each serving into one of the small brown shirring dishes, sprinkle with salt and a dash of red pepper, a thin layer of finely chopped ham, grated cheese, and over all some buttered crumbs. Set into the oven in a pan of water and bake until the eggs are set. Serve with a tuft of watercress.

Cherry Brown Betty.—This is best made from fresh berries, but the drained fruit with buttered crumbs may be used, alternating the layers, and use a little of the juice to moisten when the dish is filled. Serve with either cream or hard sauce.

Spring Salad.—Slice tomatoes and cucumbers and place them on head lettuce that is well chilled. Just as it is time to serve the salad pour over a French dressing, highly seasoned with onion juice, red pepper and a half cupful or more of Roquefort cheese; stir until well blended.

Ginger Pudding.—Cover the top of a ginger bread before baking with a cupful of chopped almonds; a few raisins may be added to the batter. Cut with a fork while hot and serve with a hard sauce.

Princess Cream.—Wrap one pint of cream, add sugar and vanilla to flavor. Crumb some stale cake and moisten with orange juice and grated rind. Put a layer of the cream in a glass bowl, then a layer of the crumbs and a few pieces of jelly, cut small; more cream and cake until the dish is full. Garnish with cubes of jelly and chill well before serving. Nuts of various kinds may be added if so desired.

Cooked chestnuts in almost any salad of apples and celery with chestnuts is a good combination.

"There's a Reason"

SENTRY FIRED ON SUSPICIOUS PAIR

Two Men With a Box in West Shore
Cut Refused to Halt at Soldier's Command—Three Shots Fired at Wilbur.

Shortly after midnight this morning two men were detected by a sentry in the West Shore cut north of the Wilbur bridge carrying a box and acting in a suspicious manner. The men were on the east bank of the cut. The sentry ordered the men to halt and gave the command three times. They turned and started to run and he fired three shots at them but the men made their escape in the darkness. Early this morning searching details of soldiers were covering the territory between Rondout and the West Shore searching backyards with lanterns and bent on locating the pair but the search was unsuccessful. The soldiers, it is understood, have been instructed not to fire unless persons refuse to halt at their command. They are required to call halt three times and then shoot to hit.

It is thought that the Home Defense Committee, composed of Mayor Canfield, Judge Jenkins and Supervisor Hartshorn, will issue some instructions to citizens upon the necessity for obeying rules against trespass upon railroad property and other public structures.

Under the rules of the railroad companies and state law, trespass on railroad property is forbidden although the prohibition has not been enforced locally up to the time the soldiers of the Seventy-first regiment took up the duty of guarding the West Shore bridge. Persons in the habit of using the bridge and the hill over the tunnel for a shortcut will be stopped instantly as the soldiers have no means of distinguishing between a workman with a lunch-box and a spy with an infernal machine intending to blow up one or both of these structures.

Wednesday night a man insisted to one of the guardsmen on his right to cross the bridge. The man laughed at first when the guard said he would shoot if he did not turn back but finally desisted when he saw the soldier meant business.

BILLIONS FOR WAR PREPARATION.

By Telegraph to The Freeman.

Washington, April 5.—The enormous total of nearly three and one-half billions of dollars, $3,461,873,284 to be exact, will be the initial amount authorized by Congress to be expended getting ready for the war with Germany if the treasury estimates are enacted into law as seems certain. Of this enormous amount the army alone asks for almost three billion dollars to place in the field the troops asked for by the president and to supply them as an army should be supplied.

The other estimates submitted to the House because of the war preparation were as follows:

For extraordinary expenses of the naval establishment, $292,538,799.

To bring to a high state of efficiency the coastal communication system of the coast guards, $600,000.

For an increase in the enlisted strength of the navy and marine corps to 150,000 and 30,000 men respectively, $175,855,751.

Department of justice, suppression of crimes against the United States, $300,000.

STREET GOSSIP ABOUT TOWN

"Well, I know what I am going to do now," said the friend to the street corner politician.

"What is that?" queried the politician.

"I am going to let Mayor Canfield appoint me a member of the board of censors to censor movie plays and public dances," said the friend with a smile.

"There is no board of censors appointed by the mayor," retorted the politician.

"Yes there is," replied the friend.

"I read about it in the paper."

"No you did not," said the politician.

"What you read was a resolution to appoint such a board which was introduced by Alderman Brown at the common council meeting on Tuesday."

"I am sure I read where the board is to be appointed," persisted the friend.

"You are like a lot of people," said the politician in a disgusted tone.

"What do you mean?" flared the friend.

"Never read anything straight in the paper," retorted the politician.

"But I did," said the friend.

"What you read," explained the politician, "was that such a motion had been introduced but had been laid on the table."

"What does that mean?" asked the friend.

"That no action will be taken in the matter until it is called up at another meeting of the city fathers," explained the politician.

"I think it a good scheme to have such a board though," argued the friend.

"Oh, did not say it was not," retorted the politician.

"What do you think of it then?"

"I have not given it a thought," replied the politician, "but I suppose it could be done."

"Sure it could be done," argued the friend.

"I can't say I would like to have my amusements censored by some men who might be appointed to such a board though," objected the politician.

"Don't you think I would make a good censor?" asked the friend.

"Oh, well, there might be worse," retorted the politician.

"What do you think of the action of the common council in killing the censor ordinance?" asked the friend.

"Well," replied the politician, judiciously, "I am glad the matter is settled anyway."

"But that is not answering my question," argued the friend.

"Well, give me as much time as the common council had to give you my opinion then," retorted the politician.

"What does a violation of the agriculture law mean that I read about every so often in the papers?" asked the friend, changing the subject.

"Probably what a man does after he has planted free government seed and waited for a crop," explained the politician.

"Have you decided what you are going to plant this year?" asked the friend.

"No, can't say I have," replied the politician. "For I have been following up the present crisis too much to give thought to anything else."

"I think everybody ought to plant a garden though," argued the friend.

"Why?" asked the politician.

"Gives you a chance to show your patriotism," explained the friend.

"What are you doing?" asked the friend.

"I am refraining from owning a dog that keeps the neighbors awake nights," retorted the politician.

"I don't think that is so very patriotic," argued the friend.

"If you were kept awake nights by the howls of a neighbor's dog you would though," retorted the politician heatedly. "If I had my way," he added, "I would make it compulsory for owners having such dogs to bring them up to the city hall and let the police improve their marksmanship."

"I am glad that there are a lot of patriots in Kingston," said the friend, following a pause.

"What do you mean?" asked the politician.

"Why, anywhere you go you will find men standing when the national emblem is played," explained the friend.

"Yes," retorted the politician, "and when the call to enlist comes you will find many of the same men still standing—at home."

PREPAREDNESS THE THING.

Without It, Gardening on Vacant Lots is Useless.

Editor Kingston Daily Freeman.

I see in Tuesday's issue of the Freeman that the Chamber of Commerce has voted to adopt an agricultural plank in their platform.

The idea is commendable and ought to be encouraged. It should lower the H. C. O. L. for a large number of families, but will it? The out door exercise will at least be beneficial.

The idea seems to obtain that anybody can be a failure at anything else and then be successful as a farmer, gardener or at raising chickens.

The facts are just the reverse. What would be the result if the farmer and gardener should take a year off or all crops should fail? The great war would end some other things also.

As to those vacant lots, it would be a pleasure to see them under cultivation instead of sowing the country side with weed seed. The nature of the ground about Kingston is sandy, poor and porous. The vacant lot to be productive should have a good coat of manure or some fertilizer spread broadcast and plowed or dug in deep, and another repressing harrowed in or worked in some other way. It will take several seasons' cultivation to get city lots in condition to give best results. If the ground is not properly prepared, it is folly to waste time and seed on it.

Gardening is a gamble. The amateur will have to invest in seeds, plants, tools, insecticides, artificial watering and "keep on the job" every day until frost comes. Kernal vigilance is the price of a crop. After fifty years at gardening I find new problems to solve, something new to study every day in the year.

My idea is not to discourage anyone planning to have a garden but to make them realize that a garden well planned is half the battle.

Respectfully,

THOMAS A. STONE.

TONGORE.

The sea of emotion is a tempest-tossed And thy hopes may vanish like foam. When calls are shivered, and compass lost. Then look to the light of home.

GOOD THINGS TO EAT.

A dish which is both wholesome and appetizing is clabbered milk. Set away a bowl of milk to rise and allow the cream to rise and the milk to sour. Chill and sprinkle with brown or maple sugar and a little nutmeg and serve in sherbet cups for dessert. Nuts with the sugar and spice may be added if more nutriment is needed to supply the want.

Swiss Eggs.—When eggs are plentiful this is a dish we may enjoy with a clear conscience. Break an egg for each serving into one of the small brown shirring dishes, sprinkle with salt and a dash of red pepper, a thin layer of finely chopped ham, grated cheese, and over all some buttered crumbs. Set into the oven in a pan of water, and bake until the eggs are set. Serve with a tuff of water dress.

Cherry Brown Betty.—This is best made from fresh berries, but the drained fruit with buttered crumbs may be used, alternating the layers, and use a little of the juice to moisten when the dish is filled. Serve with either cream or hard sauce.

Spring Salad.—Slice tomatoes and cucumbers and place them on head lettuce that is well chilled. Just as it is time to serve the salad pour over a French dressing, highly seasoned with onion juice, red pepper and a half cupful or more of Roquefort cheese; mix well and serve.

Ginger Pudding.—Cover the top of a ginger bread before baking with a cupful of chopped almonds; a few raisins may be added to the batter. Cut with a fork while hot and serve with a hard sauce.

Princess Cream.—Wrap one pint of cream, add sugar and vanilla to flavor. Crumb some stale cake and moisten with orange juice and grated rind. Put a layer of the cream in a glass bowl, then a layer of the crumbs and a few pieces of jelly, cut small; more cream and cake until the dish is full. Garnish with cubes of jelly and chill well before serving. Nuts of various kinds may be added if so desired.

Cooked chestnuts in almost any sized of apples and celery with chestnuts is a good combination.

KINGSTON, N. Y., APRIL 5, 1917.

Due respect must always be shown the American flag, the symbol of the Union, but such expressions should not be permitted to slip over. Patriotism calls for sacrifices other than jumping up and down when certain musical selections are played and the flag swung before an audience. Army regulations and custom call upon military men and civilians, respectively, to rise and remain standing while "The Star Spangled Banner" is being played or sung. But of late there have been numerous spectacles of people being compelled to rise at "America" and at so-called patriotic medleys, exhibitions of misdirected energy that are neither patriotic nor useful. Yet any rational being, who has the temerity to show his good sense by remaining seated or falling to go with the majority in some of these hysterical demonstrations, is at once styled a traitor. Some of the busybodies who are so mightily concerned over loyalty pledges and pro forma observances of far-fetched flag, etiquette would be among the last to volunteer their services or their money for the actual defense of the Nation. As self-constituted high priests of patriotism, they endeavor to shine, although they worship the symbol rather than the thing itself. Such persons are not patriots but merely pests and should be treated accordingly.

It is unfortunate that poor newspaper judgment ever gave circulation to the canard about the alleged arrest of a German girl spy on the Ashokan aqueduct with the plans of that structure concealed in a false bottom in her trunk. Common sense tells us that no such dangerous effort on the part of any spy would be necessary in order to get plans or maps of the New York City water supply system. Only a few years ago these were quite widely circulated through the newspapers, and by means of picture post cards, while the topographical features of the Catskills were shown on relief maps printed by the Federal Government and quite generally sold to any aliens or citizens who had the price, a few cents for each map. So if any spies were anxious to obtain possession of the same, any excursion to the aqueduct would be unnecessary until the time for the contemplated outrage to be attempted. The maps and the false bottom in the trunk are old stuff—both items having been related from time to time ever since the militia began their patrol of the aqueduct. There ought to be a penalty on the publication of such false reports as well as for violations of the proposed newspaper censorship.

A young man fresh from college has made $15,000 from one season's crop of onions, and this youthful "onion king" of California is the subject of some rather short-sighted comment on what "trained intelligence yoked with industry can accomplish. Trained intelligence is valuable anywhere and in any line, but the little fortune mentioned was the result of the season's accidental scarcity of the product rather than of brains. The young college man will not make $15,000 this year, for the crop of onions is going to be a mighty one.

Prohibition legislation is a movable feast. Now that Kansas has prohibition of liquor, a natural consequence is the effort to prohibit smoking now incorporated in a bill before the legislature of the Sunflower State. There is a jail penalty for such offense committed in public conveyances, parks or in the caboose of freight trains. That the originator of this typical bit of reform legislation did not make the crime subject to capital punishment is due probably to the fact that Kansas does not permit infliction of the death penalty. A similar tendency toward fanatical restrictions is to be noted at Washington, where the Chamberlain Army Bill passed the last House in a form prohibiting any person or corporation from having liquor or tobacco "in his or its possession at any army post or naval station, navy yard or aboard ship." Think of it. A soldier making use of tobacco could be fined $1,000 or be imprisoned for one year! With such freakish efforts on the part of reformers, how is Uncle Sam going to be able to raise an army of a half million men if they are liable to be deprived of the solace of tobacco at any time by act of Congress?

gress? Tea and coffee will be the next objects for attack after nicotine is given its conge. It is bad enough for the individual States to be plagued by these fanatics. When they turn their efforts to Washington and army legislation, it is time for the country to call a halt on their frenzied activities.

Wild animals are reported to be taking advantage of man's preoccupation in war and to be moving back into unwatched and unharmed districts from which they had formerly been banished. From several countries of Europe have come stories of the depredations of beasts of prey as a result of freedom to roam given them by the conditions of a war now nearly of three years' duration. In Russia, for example, it is said that wolves have dared to attack even detachments of soldiers. A desolating war of ten years could undoubtedly return large tracts, formerly reclaimed, to a state of nature and original savagery.

Too Bad.
The energetic automobile salesman had just delivered the fair customer her new car and everything was lovely. He had scarcely entered the office, however, when he received a telephone call. Said she: "I thought you told me that this car was a self-starter." "So it is," replied the salesman. "Nothing of the sort. I have to push a button to make it go."—New York Times.

Ready to Shed Them.

"Then," said the young man with a tragic air, as he was leaving the room, "this is your final decision?" "It is, Mr. Carrots," replied the young girl, firmly. "Then," he replied, his voice betraying an unusual calmness, "there is but one thing more to add." "Yes," she questioned, sweetly. "It is this—shall I return those white satin suspenders by mail, or will you have them now?"—Harper's Magazine.

A La Billy Sunday.

Observing the success of the Billy Sunday methods in the matter of conversation, Puck arises to suggest that the attempt be made to apply the same methods to other church ceremonies and activities, proposing the following formulas:

Pastor. (christening infant): "What do you want to call this hunk of excess baggage, ho?"

Presiding Pastor. "What miserable mutt giveth this skirt to be married to this gunk?"

The Bride's Father: "I'm the guy."

Industrious Usher: "Slide you ice carter! Slide!"

Passing the Plate: "Come across with the iron men, you low-life tight wads!"

Sunday School Superintendent: "All of you little sivers that want to swat Satan stand on one leg."

"AS MEN LOVE"

A thrilling story of enduring friendship nearly broken on the rocks of misunderstanding and anger—A true-to-life tale of two men and the women they loved.

SENTRY FIRED ON SUSPICIOUS PAIR

Two Men With a Box in West Shore Cut Refused to Halt at Soldier's Command—Three Shots Fired at Wilbur.

Shortly after midnight this morning two men were detected by a sentry in the West Shore cut north of the Wilbur bridge carrying a box and acting in a suspicious manner. The men were on the east bank of the river. The sentry ordered the men to halt and gave the command three times. They turned and started to run and he fired three shots at them but the men made their escape in the darkness. Early this morning searching details of soldiers were covering the territory between Rondout and the West Shore searching backwards with lanterns and bent on locating the pair but the search was unsuccessful.

The soldiers it is understood, have been instructed not to fire unless persons refuse to halt at their command. They are required to call halt three times and then shoot to hit.

It is thought that the Home Defense Committee, composed of Major Canfield, Judge Jenkins and Supervisor Harshorn will issue some instructions to citizens upon the necessity for obeying rules against trespass upon railroad property and other public structures.

Under the rules of the railroad companies and state law, trespass on railroad property is forbidden although the prohibition has not been enforced locally up to the time the soldiers of the Seventy first regiment took up the duty of guarding the West Shore bridge. Persons in the habit of using the bridge and the hill over the tunnel for a shortcut will be stopped instantly as the soldiers have no means of distinguishing between a workman with a lunch box and a spy with an internal machine intending to blow up one of both of these structures.

Wednesday night a man insisted to one of the guardsmen on his right to cross the bridge. The man laughed at first when the guard said he would shoot if he did not turn back but finally desisted when he saw the soldier meant business.

BILLIONS FOR WAR PREPARATION

By Telegraph to The Freeman.

Washington, April 5.—The enormous total of nearly three and one-half billions of dollars, $3,461,873,284 to be exact, will be the initial amount authorized by Congress to be expended getting ready for the war with Germany if the treasury estimates are enacted into law as seems certain. Of this enormous amount the army alone asks for almost three billion dollars to place in the field the troops asked for by the president and to supply them as an army should be supplied.

The other estimates submitted to the House because of the war preparation were as follows:

For extraordinary expenses of the naval establishment $292,538,790.

To bring to a high state of efficiency the coastal communication system of the coast guards, $600,000.

For an increase in the enlisted strength of the navy and marine corps to 150,000 and 30,000 men respectively, $175,855,761.

Department of justice suppression of crimes against the United States, $500,000.

Additional watchmen state, war and navy building $28,800.

Civil service commission additional employees because of extra work incidental to national defense exigencies $20,000.

First Time in the History of Politics a Woman's Bureau.

MRS. BASS ALSO SUFFRAGIST.

Wife of a Retired Chicago Lawyer Will Head Permanent Adjunct of the Democratic National Committee. Was Also a Prominent Clubwoman.

For the first time in the history of American politics a woman's bureau is to be established as a permanent adjunct of the national committee of one of the big political parties.

On March 6 Mrs. George Bass of Chicago was selected by the Democrat ic national committee as chairman of the woman's bureau and will have her headquarters with the rest of the committee in Washington.

Mrs. Bass is the wife of a retired lawyer of Chicago. During the recent presidential campaign Democratic leaders accorded Mrs. Bass the lion's share of credit for having carried ten of the twelve suffrage states of the west and middle west for Mr. Wilson.

One of her devices was to have circulated throughout these states copies of the handsomest photograph obtainable of Mr. Wilson.

BACON FLAVORS.

How to Cook It in the Epicure's Way and Season With It.

There's a world of difference between bacon well cooked and bacon badly cooked, and yet the task of cooking bacon seems so simple. Any new cook would look at you in blank surprise if you questioned her as to her ability to cook bacon, and yet not one cook in a hundred can cook it to a turn.

In the first place, bacon needs constant watching during the cooking process. It also needs to be served almost immediately on cooking. This makes it difficult for the one cook who must have charge of the preparation of an entire meal. If out kitchen regimes were large enough to provide for a special bacon cook we might solve the question quite simply.

Besides needing constant watching bacon needs to be cooked over a low flame. If you use gas for cooking it is a good idea to use a wire frame over the flame to diffuse the heat and subdue it. When the bacon is put into the griddle the fire should be low, so that the fat will be extracted enough to grease the frying pan before the bacon begins to fry vigorously. As the fat increases pour it off, leaving only enough in the griddle to keep the bacon from burning. Most persons like bacon well cooked, and it is very much more healthful when prepared in this way. Therefore, see that it is thoroughly done before allowing it to brown. Have a soft paper on a dish in the oven, and as the pieces of bacon are ready place them on paper to drain and dry a few minutes before serving. But do not permit the bacon to remain standing long before serving, as this robs it of much of its delicate flavor.

If very crisp bacon is desired it can be fried in deep fat. Or, better still, bacon drippings already saved can be poured on the griddle and heated and the bacon cooked by allowing it to fry in that deep fat for a short time at a rather high temperature. Remove it from the fat before it has begun to cool.

A delicious bacon dressing that may be served with lettuce, endive or dandelion is made by heating five tablespoonfuls of bacon fat and cooking in it two tablespoonfuls of flour and a dash of paprika. Add five tablespoonfuls of vinegar and half a cupful of water. Stir till smooth and boiling and then add the beaten yolks of two eggs. Do not let this boil after the eggs have been added.

Hats For the South.

An interesting feature of the millinery market has been the introduction of new hats for the southern season, those showing medium and wide brims and being trimmed with a great deal of hand embroidery and ornaments made of very narrow velvet ribbons. The shapes are largely of Panama and coconut straws. Quilting is another feature, especially of satin hats.

The newest sets of hats and scarfs include long mittens with gauntlet shaped wrist portion.

CIGARETTES

You compare Camels with any cigarette for purity, wholesomeness, quality, flavor, aroma; for satisfying "body"—for anything any cigarette ever did offer you! The blend of choice Turkish and choice Domestic tobaccos does away with any unpleasant cigarette after-taste or after-effect. Smokers quickly realize that the absence of coupons or premiums is due to the cost of the tobaccos.

HIGHLAND.

Highland, April 5.—Mr. and Mrs. Mulford Stowe had guests for the week end from out of town.

Mr. and Mrs. Sanderson of Grand street entertained friends from Ellenville last week.

Mrs. Dickenson, mother of Mrs. Kelsey Staples, who has been in New York for a long time visiting her daughter and was very ill while there, has recovered so she will return here some time this week.

The Dwyer family from New York city came up to their country home on Maple avenue for Easter vacation. They will arrive later, when it is warmer, for the summer, which they enjoy so much here.

Arbor Day exercises will take place on May 4. They will have a program of music and recitations and a ball game, and every one will try to win the cup. They expect to have a fine time.

Among the guests at the Nelson House, Poughkeepsie, last week we saw the Hon. F. S. Decker and son, Captain Percy Decker, of Catskill, Mr. and Mrs. A. V. Decker of Washington Hollow and Captain and Mrs. R. H. Decker of this place. These people are quite frequent diners at this hotel.

We are glad to know the auto bus from Clintondale will soon start out on its usual trips, which every one here and along the route will greatly appreciate. It is a great convenience for the ladies, who want to shop in Poughkeepsie, besides giving any one a very enjoyable ride.

Joel Sneddes of this place has been kept busy for some time; he has been doing plumbing for a number of West Park families.

Clarence Sneddes was a guest last Sunday of friends in West Park.

Many were shocked when the news came that Mrs. Parker, wife of Judge A. B. Parker, had passed away at her Fifth Avenue home in New York city on Monday morning. She was highly esteemed by friends in Kingston and several here, whom she had endeared herself to for her many kind acts and her generosity. She had a very wide circle of acquaintances and her home at Rosemount, Esopus, was the scene of many fine gatherings. She will be missed greatly throughout the surrounding country. She was a devout member of Holy Cross Church, Kingston, from which the funeral was held on Wednesday morning and very largely attended. Sympathy from a host of friends is extended to the husband, daughter and sister.

Captain R. H. Decker spent some time the first part of the week in Pleasant Valley.

A Red Cross Society was organized in this place last week of about 150 members. Now the women can get busy and get out their sewing bags and perhaps you will soon receive your instructions to make hospital garments, comfort kits and many other articles greatly needed. It is a grand thing and we hope every one will be interested, and after you sign please pay your fee, do not make extra trouble, to have a chaser after you, do your duty.

Mr. and Mrs. Edward Griffin of this place spent last Sunday with relatives in New Hamburg and had a delightful time.

Mr. and Mrs. Edward Miller spent the week end in Kingston with relatives.

Mrs. Francis Terwilliger came up from Brooklyn to her home here on White street. She will remain only a few days for a little vacation.

Mrs. Florence Lacey left here on Friday morning for a visit with relatives in Philadelphia.

The Rev. J. C. Coddington of M. E. Church is attending conference in New York city. He will return from there to be present at the church and preach an Easter sermon on Easter morning. The Rev. E. Bray will preach in the evening and the Rev. Mr. Coddington will return to New York to hear the famous Billy Sunday in the evening.

Mr. and Mrs. J. R. Mellis have as their guest, for a ten day vacation their daughter, Marjorie, who is attending school at Saratoga.

Principal E. A. Marsh and wife have been entertaining their friend, Miss O'Brien, from Long Island, for a few days the past week.

Mr. and Mrs. Frank Van Wert of Maple avenue were out of town last week on a visit with relatives.

Miss Bertha Weismiller of Huntington, Long Island, spent her Easter vacation here with her people.

The Odd Fellows had a pleasant evening last Thursday week when the ladies met with them and enjoyed games and after that a supper. We were informed there was a short musical program and a few speakers from out of town, who interested all. There were nearly one hundred present.

Miss Dorcas Denney of West Park was a guest of relatives in this place last week.

Mrs. Maria Harper of Clintondale is a guest of Mr. and Mrs. G. H. Brown of Vineyard avenue.

Mr. and Mrs. Charles Farnum entertained guests from out of town for the week end.

Mr. and Mrs. Orsen Sheeley had guests from New York city the week end at their new home on Grand street.

The official board of the M. E. Church held a very interesting and profitable meeting Monday evening.

The U. D. Society was very nicely entertained at the home of Mrs. Philip Schantz Saturday afternoon last. They held their regular business session, and at the close of that they all busied themselves with fancy work, and Mrs. Schantz served all with a dainty and palatable lunch. Each member and guest was delighted with the afternoon's pleasure.

Tuesday afternoon the Schantz home was thrown open for the meeting of the Music Study Club. The members and guests were all well pleased. We hear they are making arrangements for their annual concert and reception which this year will be held in J. W. Peeter's Hall in May.

American Mineral Oil

PRACTICAL HEALTH HINT.

Use of Mineral Oil.

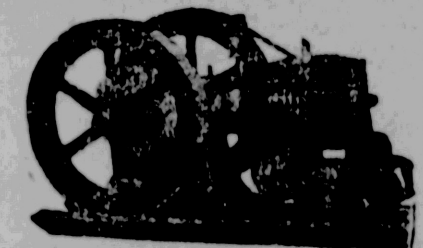

Dr. Le Tanneur contributes to the Paris Medical some practical points in the use of mineral oil in constipation. The oil, he says, is in no way digested or even modified by the juices of the stomach and intestines. It acts as a lubricant and nothing else, though it tends to heal abrasions of the intestinal wall caused by rough particles of food.

The New York Medical Journal says mineral oil should be taken either before breakfast or after dinner, two tablespoonfuls being a dose. Its use should be continued every day for at least a fortnight, when the bowels will continue to work naturally without it, for the mineral oil is in no sense a cathartic, but it will cure constipation.—Kingston Daily Freeman, February 17, 1917.

ESSENTIAL THINGS FOR HOME GARDENS

George Burgevin Gives Many Useful
Points in Paper Read Before Uster
Garden Club—Preparation of Soil of First Importance.

Of more practical value than a dozen agricultural bulletins and filled with a wealth of useful suggestions to home gardeners, was the paper read by George Burgevin of Valentin Burgevin's Sons, florists and nurserymen, before the Uster Garden Club on Tuesday afternoon. The paper deals with local conditions and contains a harvest of ideas from the well cultivated garden of experience in horticulture. Mr. Burgevin's paper is as follows:

The soil is the foundation upon which, in starting a garden, we rest our hopes for success with our plants. It is as necessary to have good soil in a garden as it is to have a foundation upon which to build a house. When I say good soil, I mean soil that has had the proper preparation or treatment. I do not care whether you intend planting one tree, shrub or plant, or whether you intend planting a thousand, the soil in which you plant should first be gotten into the proper condition to receive them. It does not matter what the nature of the soil is, whether clay, loam or sandy—upon the ultimate result depends how well the beginning was made.

People often think that because soil is black, it is rich. While this is often so and plants thrive in it, it does not follow that it is rich in humus or plant food but that they usually grow well in it because black soil is generally loose and porous and does not bake or get hard as is the case with clay or loam and most plants delight in sending their feeding roots into soil of this nature.

Manure as Soil Builder.
There is nothing better than stable manure as a soil builder. Nothing ever has taken its place, and I dare say, never will. Commercial fertilizers are good as plant foods, but they are not soil builders. You will say that stable manure is hard to get, and I agree with you, in that it is getting more scarce, but it can be found.

I have for years advocated the gathering of the leaves in the fall and I am going to mention this again. Gather the leaves, put them in a corner in an out of the way place in your back yard, or bury them just below the surface of the ground in concave form, so that the water from the rain or melting snow will run into and help to rot them. They are nature's fertilizers and will give you an excellent substitute for stable manure with which to build up your soil. Every gardener should have a little out of the way place, or pit where such things as grass clippings, weeds that are taken out of the garden, flower beds and paths, the sod that is cut from the edges of the walks in the spring and any other decaying vegetable matter, can be taken. Then in the autumn as the leaves fall, gather them and take this accumulation and proceed to build a compost pile, by alternating the leaves with a layer of this accumulation, each layer about four inches thick and as early in the spring as the frost is out of it, turn it over, continuing to do so every two weeks or so until ready to use it. By so doing you will have produced a soil-building material almost as good as stable manure at a very much less cost. Besides you will conserve what is now a great economic waste and do away with the unsanitary nuisance of burning the leaves in the street gutters where, after burning, their ashes are washed into the sewers and are lost.

Now I do not say that commercial fertilizers are not good, for they are good, but they are plant foods to be used when plants are in an active growing condition, the buds just beginning to show, and you want larger and handsomer blooms. Care should always be taken not to use too much at one time but to use a small quantity and apply often, always working it well into the soil. And yet you can readily see that planting in soil not properly prepared in the beginning will hardly grow plants strong enough to admit of any feeding. To put fertilizer into soil near the roots of delicate or unhealthy plants with the idea that by so doing it will stimulate them into active growth is to expect something contrary to nature, because the plants are not in a condition to take it up. Comparatively speaking, if we are ill and have no appetite we would not care to be fed upon lobster salad, mince pie or other rich foods not easy to digest. And so it is with plants.

Don't Work Wet Soil.
Having properly prepared the soil and sufficient attention being paid to the many little details the plants demand, we are on the straight road to success. Another very important thing to remember is never to plant or work in heavy soil when it is wet. By heavy soil I particularly refer to clay or clay loam. A good way to determine when this condition exists is to take a much soil up into your hand as it will conveniently hold and close it, and upon opening your hand if the soil does not crumble or fall apart it is too wet to work. This is indeed very important because soil of this character when handled too wet will, when it does dry out, be hard and lumpy and even weeds will not grow as well. Sandy soil is not so particular in this respect as the former and can be spaded or worked in the day following a heavy rain.

Spading for Perennials.
Few amateur gardeners appreciate the value of deep spading or trenching, so I shall try to tell you of some of the advantages of it. In the preparation of a bed or border in which to plant perennials, roses, or plants that are to occupy it for several years, the soil should be dug to a depth of at least twelve inches by making a trench of the same width and then putting four or five inches of decayed manure or compost (such as I have before described) in the bottom, then digging another trench alongside and again manure, filling up or covering as you proceed until the bed is completed. This method not only keeps the soil loose and open but planting in such a prepared soil will encourage the roots to go down for their nourishment instead of trying to find it near the surface, which is what they would do if not enticed to go down.

The season of gardening is upon us and the thoughts of the gardener have long since dwelt upon this topic. The first thing to be done in a garden is to remove the covering applied the previous fall. This should be done as soon as the frost is out of it by taking off, say, half of it and as the weather gets warmer, the remainder. If the covering is left on, the perennials or bulbs will grow up through it and will make a soft, brittle growth which is very apt to be broken off in removing the covering when left on too long. Where the fall covering was stable manure, this should be lifted from the plants and the coarsest taken away for your compost pile and all small or finer particles placed between the plants and later when the soil is fit to work in, this can be spaded under. Always for this purpose use a spade fork, and dig pretty close to the plants and as deep as the space between them will admit. Always apply manure in the spring, digging it in to the soil when the first spading is done and later more can be very beneficially applied which will act as a mulch and will help keep the soil loose.

After the middle of May the soil should be stirred or hoed at least every ten days, if we have heavy rains, as soon thereafter as the condition of the soil will permit. This not only keeps the soil from forming a crust but destroys the weeds before they take the nourishment out of the soil that the plants should have.

Annuals in Between.
A garden planted entirely of perennials will find itself shy of bloom after the first abundant flowering period is over. For instance, when the Iris, Peonies, Delphiniums, Lychnis, Campanula, Medum, Lillium Candidum, Hollyhocks, etc., are gone, such gardens will have lost much of their brilliancy. It is the more noticeable then because many of the conspicuous beauties flower at about the same time. Then when the Phloxes, Artemisia, Rudbeckia, Salvia, Azarea and others begin to flower the gap is again partly filled up. So if it is the desire to have an abundance of flowers all times, both for cutting as well as for adornment, I should advise planting perennials a sufficient distance apart to admit of planting annuals and summer flowering bulbs between them, which distance in the case of large beds or borders should be from two to four feet, in small beds on a lawn or which is surrounded by a path a little closer is not impracticable.

Those who like to grow their own annuals can now make the first sowing of asters, zinnia, balsams, petunias, or anything to their liking which can be transplanted into the open later. This can be done by using small wooden trays into which holes have been bored for drainage, or earthen pans such as fern pots or the like, but remember to place them in a sunny window in your homes (when hotbeds or cold frames covered with sash are not available) because if allowed to come up in a dark place they grow long, spindly and tender and are very likely to damp off. The sowing of a few annual seeds every two or three weeks thereafter until July first and planting some gladioli, tigris and monbrethas, at about the same intervals, beginning with the gladioli about May first and planting between such perennials as will be out of bloom and cut down later will furnish a profusion of bloom in the gardens until late in the fall or until the frost cuts them off.

Starting of Seedlings.
About May first the seeds should be sown in a little spot of ground that is called a seed bed out in the open. Select a sunny and preferably a protected or sheltered place. As the season advances and the sun gets stronger the soil into which these seeds are sown should be shaded until the little plants poke their noses through the soil. Then when the little seedlings have developed the third or fourth leaf, transplant them into another bed placing them from two to three inches apart, always shading them for a day or two if the sun shines during this operation. And then when they have again grown so as to completely cover the ground they should be planted in their permanent quarters.

There are a few very lovely flowers that we cannot well afford to be without in a well regulated garden that, however, do not take kindly to being transplanted; some of which are poppies, mignone, euphorbia, verigata and centauria or sweet sultans, and such are therefore better sown where they are to remain.

In small gardens, or where the space will admit of only a few plants I believe it to be much more satisfactory and a great deal cheaper to buy the plants than to try raising them from seeds unless you are remunerated by the pleasure you get out of doing it. When sowing seeds, whether indoors or out, it is necessary to have the soil well pulverized by screening through a fine sieve and then sowing seeds in drills from four to six inches apart, covering them according to the size of the seeds. Fine seeds should not be covered with more than just enough soil to hide them or twice the depth of the size of the seed. Nasturtiums, sweet peas or all large seeds should be sown deeper and covered with from two to three inches of soil and in the case of sweet peas four inches is better, and avoid planting on a hard surface.

The trench for sweet peas should also not be less than twelve inches deep, with from three to four inches of well decayed manure in the bottom.

Watering.
All plants after being transplanted should receive a quantity of water sufficient to wet the soil immediately around them and enough to go into the soil below or under the roots.

This will require at least two waterings in the manner described as follows: Use a watering pot with the hose removed, or if a hose is used it should be without the nozzle and the water applied moderately slow or without any force to avoid washing. Where plants have been grown from seed and transplanted as before mentioned it is not necessary to wait until the sun is in the west to plant in permanent quarters, for it can be done in the morning or midday with just as good results. I am of the opinion that amateur gardeners are as likely to water the plants in gardens too much as they are to water them not enough. Plants should receive only as much water as to keep the soil moderately moist after the first copious watering given after transplanting. To keep soaking the plants every day will not only give you weak stems and consequently poor flowers but you are unconsciously inviting all kinds of fungi and rust for attack. Plants need water when they are thirsty and they are most thirsty when in active growth. So when watering is done give enough to wet the soil thoroughly and don't give any more until the plants need it. I should advise against the general use of a lawn sprinkler in a garden, particularly when a promiscuous watering is done; first, because it is not easy to determine the quantity of water that is supplied to plants by it; second, plants that do not require much water get just as much as those that are crying for it. To illustrate, when the Delphiniums and others have done flowering and are cut back in preparation to flower again they are in a semi-dormant state for a short time and are far better off without water or a very little until they again make another start.

So I should advise watering the plants individually as they require it and not to soak the whole bed or garden for that is what a lawn sprinkler will do if given a chance.

In a protracted spell of dry weather or when the hot south winds seem to draw all the life out of the plants and the foliage, the sprinkler can be used to very good advantage once or twice a week in addition to the regular watering with very beneficial results as a substitute for what nature is failing to supply. This watering, particularly in mid-summer, should be done in late afternoon or evening so that the plants receive all the benefits before evaporation takes place the next day.

To be successful in the growing of plants after having paid the required attention to soil, etc., it is absolutely necessary to love the work in connection with it as well as the expectant result—the flowers the plants bring forth. There can be no true friendship between man and man unless there are many things in common and unless a relative sympathetic feeling exists between the gardener and his plants, whether he be a professional or an amateur, any amount of work will not bring the best result, because it would not be given with the same thought and tender care. So where love for cultivating plants is natural, as is the sympathetic feeling that exists between a real gardener and his work, the plants respond because they have their needs administered to in the right way.

When the real gardener passes through his greenhouse or garden and notices a plant in need of water or one that has fallen over for lack of proper support, he would no more pass it by without administering to its wants than a mother would pass her child when in distress without her tender and loving assistance. Gardening is an excellent educator in patience and perseverance. The more we do of it (if the work is to our liking) the more interested we become in it, and the more pleasure we get from its results.

To beginners I would say grow only a few plants and take proper care of them until you have acquired a taste for this charming and most beautiful of recreations. Do not get hooked up with anything but the truth, namely, that enthusiasm at the start and neglect afterward can have only one result—which is failure.

I can not refrain at this time to speak of the numberless novelties put before us every year, with enticing descriptions and distracting colored plates, some of which are indeed very meritorious and should belong to gardens whose space will admit of quantities. But too often have I found that they mostly are not much of an improvement over older varieties already cultivated. Novelties as a general thing are expensive and when we buy them we give them a little better place, if possible, and what is better than position, more thought and more careful attention. We go to magnificent flower shows and see roses, carnations, chrysanthemums and in fact everything else worth while for a garden, but we see them not as they would grow in your garden, but as they were especially grown for exhibition by experts. I get a great deal of amusement when I am at these exhibitions out of the questions I hear asked of the attendants, for instance: "What is the name of that rose? Will it grow like that out of doors? Does it bloom all summer? Is it perfectly hardy, etc.?"

Where my amusement comes in is that the answers are invariably in the affirmative, and correctly so. They will grow just like them, if they get the same treatment as did those on exhibition. There is, however, a great disadvantage in growing roses in the open where we have no control over the elements. When it rains too much, we can not stop it. When it is too cool, we can not apply heat. When it is hot, they must endure it. Whereas, in a greenhouse all these things are under control for at least six months in the year. For that reason roses and the like are, as a general thing, much more beautiful and more perfect when grown under glass.

Spraying with Insecticides.
In looking through some catalogues recently I counted almost as many spraying materials as there are "varieties of Heinz pickles." No doubt they are all good, but no kind of insect does very little or no harm to another. My experience is that for aphids, black or green, something with a nicotine basis is best. For the rose beetle, arsenate of lead is good, for blight, mildew or rust fungine or a new spraying material which we have used with excellent results called Sulco V. B.

This is the best thing to destroy mildew, red spiders, rust or fungi. We have lately used it also to keep all kinds of aphids in check. I believe it is of as much importance to properly apply what we use and to begin spraying as a prevention rather than a cure, as it is the kind we use. A whisk broom is not a good thing to use, but perhaps better than nothing, because with it the spraying material can not be applied on the under side of the leaves as well, where the insects mostly are. There are several spraying machines on the market for this purpose, some of which can be bought for fifty cents that will answer very well for all purposes in a small garden, because with them more effective work can be done.

My advice is to supply yourselves with a syringe or sprayer and begin your attack on the insects just as soon as the roses and other plants start growing and keep it up once or twice a week until the plants have flowered or the growth matured. After that once in ten days is likely to be often enough.

We have started with the beginning of spring work and followed up with the necessary work to be done in the summer and now comes the autumn and winter preparations in the garden.

As soon as plants have finished flowering and the stalks begin drying up or are cut down by the frost remove them by cutting them close to the ground. If pulled off or broken injury is likely to come to the crowns, which form just above the roots, for another season's bloom.

Trimming of Plants.

Shrubby plants like the tree peonies, caryopteris or blue spiraea and others often planted between perennials should be trimmed only to make them shapely. Roses, too, should never be trimmed in this latitude in the fall. It has been my experience that they winter much better. Then, too, the long shoots can be pulled over and covered with soil to hold them down to prevent them from a continual thawing and freezing. It is best not to do any covering until the latter part of November or December, depending entirely on the weather.

There should first be at least two or three inches of frost in the ground, then about four inches of coarse manure or whatever material that is available should be placed directly over the plants. If the covering is put on before the ground is frozen the field mice, etc., will establish headquarters in your garden, and feed and have a general good time on what your prospects should be in the next season. And later as the weather gets colder another covering of the same thickness should be put, not only over the plants, but covering the entire bed. This is usually all the protection perennials need. But never use leaves because they lay too close or solid over the plants and I have found that the water from the decaying leaves is injurious to some perennials and bulbs.

Protection During Winter.

All evergreen shrubs, especially Rhododendrons, Kalmia (Mountain Laurel) should have evergreen branches placed in the ground between them and over their heads to protect them from the winter sun, but should also have the ground well mulched to prevent deep freezing, because through the roots the leaves get the necessary supply of moisture during the winter as well as in summer.

Have you ever wondered why your plants don't grow, and the flowers they furnish are not as fine as they were in some other years even though they had the same attention? The principal reason for this is the condition of the weather and its effects on the things we plant.

Take for example last year. I do not recall a summer when the weather was so much against vegetation generally. Up to about July 6th, it was cold and wet. After that it was hot and wet until well into the fall and what was not hindered from growing by these conditions was attacked by fungi, rust and myriads of insects which usually follow such unnatural conditions. So do what we may, if the elements are against us, our efforts can not bring much reward. But instead of being discouraged at such times we must be optimistic and look forward with hope that another year will bring more favorable conditions, for it usually does.

Gardening is an old, old story. It is related that Piny, the Elder, nearly twenty centuries ago summed it up in a sentence of just six words, "Dig deep, manure well, work often."

A Chance for Children.

I am going to detain you for a few moments longer and and turn from the aesthetic to the more material kind of gardening. Also it is one in which I know you all to be very much interested; namely, in the growing of more vegetables and your efforts to encourage the children to do more of this kind of gardening. Owing to the stress of the high cost of living, it is indeed timely. The old saying that necessity is the mother of invention can very well be applied here, and now. The children can do much to relieve this condition by growing some table vegetables in the back yard.

But they can not do it all. And why should they? They should be encouraged and stimulated by example by their older brothers and sisters and particularly by their parents. The ground is here and I believe most of its available. There are hundreds of lots within the city limits that are allowed to grow nothing but a luxuriant crop of weeds. If all this ground and that in the backyards which were not producing anything heretofore were plowed and planted with corn, potatoes, cabbage, etc., this year if not much more than a half crop was the result of this effort in addition to what is regularly produced, Kingston, instead of buying potatoes this fall could sell some to its less industrious neighboring cities.

From an economic sense alone, what a fine thing this would be, but then to my mind there is much more to it than that. It would teach the children to do something useful and be a good lesson in efficiency and industry and that it is not a disgrace to work, that nobody but the poor children work, and then only out of necessity.

A Useful Recreation.

I believe that when children are taught to do something useful from the very beginning, they make more useful and consequently better citizens when they grow up and I believe what I have said could be accomplished and still give the boys all the time they need for baseball, kite flying and other recreations from which they would get no return.

Gardening is no harder work than most of the recreations indulged in by the young people of our city and they therefore should not be told that it is work, but only a healthful exercise and once they become interested they will need no other encouragement than the reward that follows intelligent, faithful application.

Makes and Fills Bags.
An inventor has used the sausage machine as his model in devising a machine which makes and fills bags at the same time.

MILTON.

Milton, April 5.—The suffrage vaudeville given last Friday in Woolsey Hall was a great success. The entertainment opened with "The Fairy Shoon," a little play written by Miss Grace T. Hallock when at Mt. Holyoke College. The staging was very pretty. Miss Hallock took the minstrel's part, the little Misses Gladys Taber and Joyce Preston. Leprechaun and the fairy child. This play is distinguished by being played first in Spain. A girl friend and also a student at Holyoke introduced it in that country. A company of about twenty young girls and boys were transformed into a lively and exceedingly attractive minstrel troupe. Their songs, jokes, dancing and band music were remarkably well done. The male quartet by M. A. Northrip, Russell Hallock, William Donaldson, and Ambrose Emmett, solos by Miss Evelyn Northrip and Miss Winifred McManus, and duet by Alsdorf and Northrip, and jig by Miss de Leon were great. In fact, every one in the company did wonderfully well. Director Taber won loud applause for the lively manner in which he led the "band." The Misses Hallock and de Leon surely deserved much credit for making the affair such a grand success. The net proceeds were $30.

The orchestra, Knud Dalgreen, Peter and Fred McManus were very entertaining. The affair was so pleasing that they are asked to give it in other places. We may also hear them again in Milton for the benefit of some other good cause.

Dudley Palmer has returned to Folly Farm from New York city. Mr. and Mrs. Ward Crowell and family are moving to Garnerville.

Nicholas Crane will soon take possession of the Goethius place. Mrs. Noah Travis of West Park visited her father, Delbert Warren, recently.

The Christensen auction brought in fair prices. The family are in their new home in Brooklyn. Mr. Christensen is now in full charge of the Wicks drug store, where he learned the business some years ago.

The funeral of Thomas McManus, Sr., who died on Thursday last, was held in St. James's Church on Monday morning where a requiem mass was offered for the repose of his soul.

Mrs. Stinson, who has been in New York city for medical treatment, has returned to her home somewhat improved.

Miss Edna B. Dodd of Newark, N. J., is at her summer home here for Easter vacation.

Messrs. Russell and Joseph Hallock of Oakwood Seminary and Julian Preston of Cornell College and Miss Ellen S. Smith of Pratt Institute, Brooklyn, are spending their Easter recess at the homes of their parents here.

The Misses Lopez and McManus were in Newburgh on Monday.

586.8 Miles

Through the Heart of Chicago in 24 Hours

A Typical Chalmers Performance

At 12 noon, Monday, March 26, a stock Chalmers seven-passenger touring car with first and second gears removed, was started north on Michigan Boulevard through Chicago traffic.

At noon Tuesday, March 27, the Chalmers was stopped at the starting point. It had gone 586.8 miles through Chicago's densest traffic. The motor had never been stopped. Nothing but high gear was used.

To prove conclusively Chalmers flexibility on high gear, the low and intermediate gears were removed from the transmission.

The car was a standard Chalmers seven-passenger touring model, complete with standard body, top and full equipment. The same model you can buy today.

An average of slightly over 14 miles per gallon of gasoline was attained, an excellent example of Chalmers economy.

586.8 miles, through the famous congested Chicago "loop" district, is a wonderful feat. This performance on high gear is even more wonderful. It is without an equal.

It is an endorsement of the motor. It proves Chalmers reliability. It demonstrates Chalmers cooling. It shows Chalmers flexibility and perfect control. It is a new achievement.

A condensed summary of the signed certificate issued by the Contest Board of the American Automobile Association, under whose supervision the test was made, is reproduced below.

THIS IS TO CERTIFY that the Chalmers seven-passenger car above mentioned was a fully equipped stock car. It was driven for 24 hours through Chicago traffic. Only high gear was used. The motor was never stopped during the run. The mileage obtained was 586.8 miles. The gasoline consumption was an average of slightly over 14 miles per gallon.

A. H. Mendenhall

Chairman Contest Board, American Automobile Association.

Some Other Chalmers Achievements

Chicago to New York

On June 7, 1916, a Chalmers stock car shattered all existing road records between Chicago and New York, making the run of 1047 miles in 31 hours. The best previous time was made by a Packard driven by E. C. Patterson, whose time was 35 hours 43 minutes.

Giant's Despair Mountain Climb

On October 6th, 1916, a Chalmers captured the free-for-all event at the Wilkes-Barre hill climb on Giant's Despair mountain, winning the $1,000 Hollenbeck Trophy and defeating four 12-cylinder cars, several well-known racing creations and many of the highest-priced and highest-powered American cars.

Wins Pike's Peak Climb

August 11, 1916, a Chalmers carried off first honors in the 230 cubic inch class on the terrific grades of Pike's Peak in Colorado. Its time was within a few seconds of much higher-powered, and specially built machines.

Detroit to Indianapolis

On June 12, 1916, the Chalmers set a new record over the roads between Detroit and Indianapolis, 365 miles, making the trip in eight hours, 23 minutes.

Atlanta to Chattanooga

June 24, 1916, a Chalmers lowered all records between Atlanta and Chattanooga. The distance of 125 miles was covered in 3 hours, 53 minutes. This is faster than the time of the Dixie Flyer, the fastest railroad train of the south.

Dallas to San Antonio

Another famous train—the Katy Limited—was beaten by a Chalmers between Dallas and San Antonio. The Chalmers made the run in 9 hours and 22 minutes, 1 hour and 33 minutes faster than train time.

The little girl suffered intense agony, but was reported this morning as resting comfortably.

HOUSE DEBATES

WAR RESOLUTION

By Telegraph to The Freeman.

Washington, April 5.—A sensational feature of the debate in the house this afternoon on the Flood-Martin state of war resolution was a challenge by Representative Cooper of Wisconsin of President Wilson's assertion that American lives were lost when the Sussex was imperilled. This statement was not so, Cooper declared. He also defended the McLenore resolution, which would have kept Americans off armed ships.

The debate dragged in the early stages. A sensation was caused by the statement of close friends of Claude Kitchin, the majority leader, that he "very probably" would vote against the state of war resolution. Kitchin said that he would make his position plain when the time arrived for him to talk. A number of the administration leaders made it plain that if Kitchin votes against the bill they will urge the advisability of having him replaced as floor leader by a member who is entirely in sympathy with the president's policies.

Before Representative Cooper was reached an impassioned appeal for the legislation was made by Representative B. P. Harrison of Mississippi, who is recognized as the administration spokesman on the floor.

Cooper, the ranking member of the Republican minority on the foreign affairs committee, at the outset of his speech read a letter which, he said, came from Secretary of State Lansing stating that no American lives were lost when the Sussex was torpedoed in the English Channel.

GERMANY STRONGER THAN AT ANY TIME

British Chief of Staff and Winston Churchill Make Ominous Declarations as to Strength of Allies.

By Telegraph to The Freeman.

London, April 5.—Ominous declarations on the war situation were completely overshadowed today by the good news from America. General Robertson, chief of staff, in announcing that England needs 500,000 more men before July, said that Germany has trained and equipped 1,600,000 more troops and that she is stronger now than at any other time since the war began. Former First Lord of the Admiralty Winston Churchill said that the war situation for the allies had not been so serious since the autumn of 1914 and that the result of the war could not be foretold, but for the aid which the United States will bring.

The government has decreed one meatless day a week beginning April 16. The meatless day in London will be Tuesday, outside of London, Wednesday.

GRAPE SUIT TRIED.

Passmore and Mascitelli Differ at to Deal in Grapes.

The action brought by Louis K. Passmore against Geremia Mascitelli was tried before Judge Jenkins and a jury in the county court this morning.

Both parties reside in the town of Marlborough, where Mr. Passmore is a large grape grower and Mascitelli is a manufacturer of wine. For a number of years Mascitelli bought large quantities of grapes from Mr. Passmore, and last year contracted as usual for a large supply.

The action was brought originally in Justice's court in the town of Marlborough to recover about $40, being a balance due on grapes which were delivered under the contract. Mascitelli put in a counterclaim for $200 before the justice of the peace, which is the amount to which a litigant is limited in Justice's court, claiming that he had been damaged to that extent through Passmore's failure to live up to his contract; not in need of delivering the grapes contracted for, he had sold his supply to another buyer who had offered more for them.

On the trial of the case in the justice's court, judgment was rendered in favor of Mascitelli and against Passmore for $188. An appeal was taken and the trial of the case in the county court resulted. In the county court Mascitelli amended his counterclaim and fixed his damages at $250, for which amount he could not sue in the justice's court.

Most of the witnesses were examined through an interpreter, and testimony was given that sales of the Passmore grapes had been made toward the end of the season at $48 a ton, which was an advance of $5 a ton over the amount Mascitelli contracted to pay. It is claimed that Passmore had given the grapes sold at the advanced price to his son, John Passmore, the previous April. Mascitelli's case was concluded at 12:15 o'clock and court adjourned until 1:30 o'clock this afternoon. John Frank appeared for Passmore with Frank W. Brooks of counsel. Alexander Johnson of Marlborough appeared for Mascitelli.

to national committee as chairman of the woman's bureau and will have her headquarters with the rest of the committee in Washington.

Mrs. Bass is the wife of a retired lawyer of Chicago. During the recent presidential campaign Democratic leaders aided Mrs. Bass the lion's share of credit for having carried ten of the twelve suffrage states of the west and middle west for Mr. Wilson.

One of her devices was to have circulated throughout these states copies of the handsomest photograph obtainable of Mr. Wilson.

BACON FLAVORS.

How to Cook It in the Epicurean Way and Season With It.

There is a world of difference between bacon well cooked and bacon badly cooked and yet the last of cooking bacon seems so simple. Any new cook would look at you in blank surprise if you questioned her as to her ability to cook bacon and yet not one cook in a hundred can cook it to a turn.

In the first place, in the modern cook's kitchen, during the cooking process, it is a good idea to be saved at most moments by an oil. This makes it difficult for the one cook who must have charge of the preparation of an entire meal. If our kitchen regimen were large enough to provide for a special bacon cook we might solve the question quite simply.

Besides needing constant watching, bacon needs to be cooked over a low flame. If you use gas for cooking it is a good idea to use a wire frame over the flame to diffuse the heat and subdue it. When the bacon is put into the griddle the fire should be low so that the fat will be rendered enough to grease the frying pan before the bacon begins to fry vigorously. As the fat in reserves pour it off leaving enough in the griddle to keep the bacon from burning. Most persons like bacon well cooked and it is very much more healthful when it is prepared in this way. Therefore see that it is thoroughly done before allowing it to brown. Have a soft paper on a dish in the oven and as the pieces of bacon are ready place them on paper to drain and dry a few minutes before serving. But do not permit the bacon to remain standing long before serving as this ruins it of much of its delicate flavor.

If you crisp bacon is desired it can be fried in deep fat. Or better still, bacon drippings already used can be poured on the griddle and heated and the bacon cooked by allowing it to fry in that deep fat for a short time at a rather high temperature. Remove it from the fat before it has begun to cool.

A delicious bacon dressing that may be served with lettuce and/or cauliflower is made by heating five table spoonfuls of bacon fat and cooking in it two table spoonfuls of onion and a dash of paprika. Add five table spoonfuls of vinegar and half a cupful of water. Stir till smooth and boiling and then add the beaten yolks of two eggs. Do not let this boil after the eggs have been added.

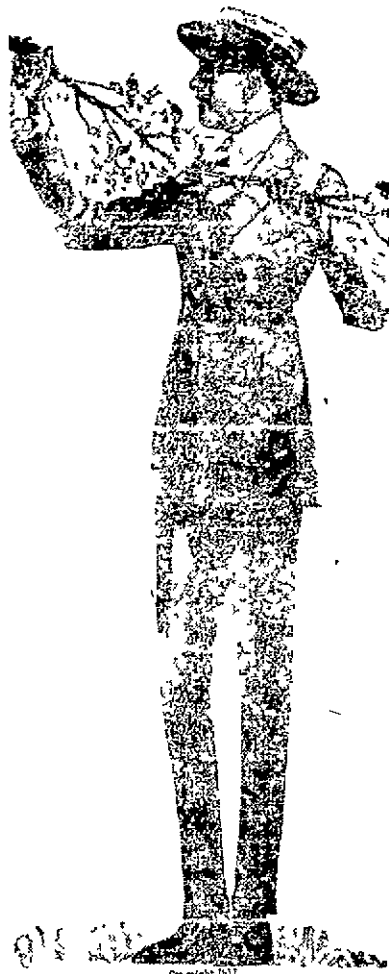

Hats For the South

An interesting feature of the millinery market has been the introduction of new hats for the southern season these showing medium and wide brims and being trimmed with a great deal of hand embroidery and ornamental bands of very narrow velvet ribbons. The shapes are larger, of Panama and cannot straw. Quilting is another feature especially of satin hats.

The newest sets of hats and scarves in wide velvet ribbons with gauze-like shaped wrist portion.

NOTE

Further said the Johnstons, accepting his daily allowance. I wish you would find that model in such a horrible parading manner. Ostentatious and excessive bourgeois.

$121.41 FOR EACH OF AUXILIARIES

Owing to some delay in the ticket returns from the various auxiliaries which were to be the financial beneficiaries of the late Fashion Show given at the opera house by the L. B. Van Wagenen store, it is only just now possible to announce the monetary results. It will be recalled that the Woman's Auxiliaries of the Kingston City Hospital, the Benedictine Sanitarium and the Y. M. C. A., were to have divided equally between them, the entire door receipts of the two afternoon performances of the Fashion Show and musical benefit, the tickets selling for the sum of twenty-five cents, while, by courtesy of Mr. Gildersleeve of the opera house 15 cents of the sale of the 25 cent tickets in the evening went to swell the fund. As a result of all this entertainment, the fine sum of $364.25 was received, (including a special contribution). Unless Mr. MacFadden is at once notified of any further sale of tickets, the L. B. Van Wagenen Company will promptly send each of the auxiliaries a check for $121.41, a sum which will be highly appreciated. The entire Fashion Show is considered by all as being an exceedingly clever idea, resulting in a pleasing entertainment, the best of music, paying advertising and the above mentioned sum of money for three most worthy organizations.

FOUR WOMEN WIN $3,000.

"Eveready Daylo" Contest Has Sensational Wind-up.

"The sum of $3,000 to each of four contestants or $12,000 paid for one single word, is the surprising conclusion of the "Eveready" name contest for a better name than "flashlight." More surprising still is the news that all winners are women. Not a man participates.

The winning name is "Daylo," and the winners who have been presented with $3,000 are Mrs. E. C. Crow of Watertown, S. D. Katherine W. Hand of Topeka, Kans., Irene M. Schultz of Union Hill, N. J., Bertha A. Wilson of Medina, N. Y.

Each of the $3,000 checks has been presented by the mayor of the contestant's home city, and each of the four fortunate women declares that she will now be able to carry out a long cherished wish. The contest took place last October, after the American Ever Ready Works of Long Island City, which made the offer of $3,000, received more than half a million name suggestions, contributed by people in every walk of life, from the shop girl to the high salaried business executive. The name "Daylo" itself meets all the contest requirements, being a coined word, yet suggestive of the product, "Day," suggesting perfect light, and "Lo," meaning "Behold." "See!" The Eveready people state that hereafter they will put the new name on all of their goods which will be known as "Eveready Daylo's" instead of "flashlights." Local dealers are celebrating the re-christening of the line by making window displays this week.

American Mineral Oil

PRACTICAL HEALTH HINT.

Use of Mineral Oil.

Dr. Le Taupier contributes to the Paris Medical some practical points in the use of mineral oil as a laxative. The oil, he says, is in no way digested or even modified by the juices of the stomach and intestines. It acts as a lubricant and nothing else, though it tends to heal abrasions of the intestinal wall caused by rough particles of food.

The New York Medical Journal says mineral oil should be taken either before breakfast or after dinner, two tablespoonfuls being a dose. Its use should be continued every day for at least a fortnight, when the bowels will continue to work naturally without it, for the mineral oil is in no sense a cathartic, but it will cure constipation.—Kingston Daily Freeman, February 17, 1917.

If you haven't a flag, just get one and show to all that our object is our country, our whole country, and nothing but our country, and it is to be hoped that our country may become a vast and splendid monument, not of oppression and terror, but of wisdom, peace and liberty upon which the world may gaze with admiration.

ESSENTIAL THINGS FOR HOME GARDENS

George Burgevin Gives Many Useful Points in Paper Read Before Ulster Garden Club—Preparation of Soil of First Importance.

Of more practical value than a dozen agricultural bulletins and filled with a wealth of useful suggestions to home gardeners, was the paper read by George Burgevin of Valentin Burgevin's Sons, florists and nurserymen, before the Ulster Garden Club on Tuesday afternoon. The paper deals with local conditions and contains a harvest of ideas from the well cultivated garden of experience in horticulture. Mr. Burgevin's paper is as follows:

The soil is the foundation upon which, in starting a garden, we rest our hopes for success with our plants. It is as necessary to have good soil in a garden as it is to have a foundation upon which to build a house. Then I say good soil, I mean soil that has had the proper preparation or treatment. I don't care whether you intend planting one tree, shrub or plant, or whether you intend planting a thousand, the soil in which you plant should first be gotten into the proper condition to receive them. It does not matter what the nature of the soil is, whether clay, loam or sandy—upon the ultimate result depends how well the beginning was made.

People often think that because soil is black, it is rich. While this is often so and plants thrive in it, it does not follow that it is rich in humus or plant food but they usually grow well in it because black soil is generally loose and porous and does not bake or get hard as the one with clay or loam and most plants delight in sending their feeding roots into soil of this nature.

Manure as Soil Builder. There is nothing better than stable manure as a soil builder. Nothing else has taken its place, and I dare say, never will. Commercial fertilizers are good as plant foods, but they are not soil builders. You will say that stable manure is hard to get, and I agree with you, in so far that it is getting more scarce, but it can be found.

I have for years advocated the gathering of the leaves. In the fall I am going to mention this again. Gather the leaves, put them in a corner in an out of the way place in your back yard, or bury them just below the surface of the ground in concave form, so that the water from the rain or melting snow will run into and help to rot them. They are nature's fertilizers and will give you an excellent substitute for stable manure with which to build up your soil. Every garden should have a little out of the way place or pit where such things as glass clippings, weeds that are taken out of the garden, flower beds and paths, the sod that is cut from the cases of the walks in the spring and any other decaying vegetable matter can be taken. Then in the autumn as the leaves fall, gather them and take this accumulation and proceed to build a compost pile, by alternating the leaves with a layer of this accumulation, each layer about four inches thick and as early in the spring as the frost is out of it, turn it over, continuing to do so every two weeks or oftener until ready to use it. By so doing you will have produced a soil-building material almost as good as stable manure at a very much less cost. Besides, you will conserve what is now great economic waste and do away with the unsightly brown mounds of burning the leaves in the street gutters, where after burning, their ashes are washed into the sewers and are lost.

Now I do not say that commercial fertilizers are good, but they are plant foods to be used when plants are in an active growing condition, the buds just beginning to show, and you want larger and handsomer blooms. Care should always be taken not to use too much at one time but to use a small quantity and apply often, always working it well into the soil. And yet you can readily see that planting in soil not properly prepared in the beginning will hardly grow plants strong enough to admit of any feeding. To put fertilizer into soil near the roots of delicate or unhealthily plants with the idea that by so doing it will stimulate them into active growth is to expect something contrary to nature, because the plants are not in a condition to take it up. Comparatively speaking, if we are ill and have no appetite we would not care to be fed upon lobster salad, mince pie or other rich foods not easy to digest. And so it is with plants.

Don't Work Wet Soil.

Having properly prepared the soil and sufficient attention being paid to the many little details the plants demand, we are on the straight road to success. Another very important thing to remember is never to plant or work in heavy soil when it is wet. If heavy soil I particularly prefer to clay or clay loam. A good way to determine when this condition exists is to take as much soil up into your hand as it will conveniently hold and close it, and upon opening your hand if the soil does not crumble or fall apart it is too wet to work. This is indeed very important because soil of this character when handled too wet will, when it does dry out, be hard and lumpy and even weeds will not grow as well. Sandy soil is not so particular in this respect as the former and can be spaded or worked in the day following a heavy rain.

Fresh stable manure should not be used or spaded into the soil that is to be planted immediately afterwards, because if enough were used to be at any time it would be too heating and do more harm than good, unless it were from a cow stable. There are several firms now putting on the market a soil or fertilizer called Humus, some of which I have tried and found very satisfactory. Where it is not possible to get manure I would recommend using that as the rotting material, working into ten to twenty square feet of soil according to the requirements. Fresh manure can be applied to the soil in the fall and then spaded under before the ground freezes up. In this manner you get into the soil all the value therein contained besides the action of the frost has a very beneficial effect on soil plowed or spaded in the fall. Especially does this apply to heavy soil.

Spading for Perennials.

For amateur gardeners, appreciate the value of deep shading or trenching, so I shall try to tell you of some of the advantages of it. The preparation of a bed or border in which to plant perennials, roses, or plants that are to occupy it for several years, the soil should be dug to a depth of at least twelve inches by making a trench of the same width and then putting four or five inches of decayed manure or compost (such as I have before described) in the bottom. Then digging another trench alongside and again manure, filling up or covering as you proceed until the bed is completed. This method not only keeps the soil loose and open but planting in such a prepared soil will encourage the roots to go down for their nourishment instead of trying to find it near the surface which is what they would do if not enticed to go down. The season of gardening is upon us and the thoughts of the gardener have long since dwelt upon this topic. The first thing to be done in a garden is to remove the covering applied the previous fall. This should be done as soon as the frost is out of it by taking off, say, half of it and as the weather gets warmer, the remainder. If the covering is left on, the perennials or bulbs will grow up through it and will make a soft, brittle growth which is very apt to be broken off in removing the covering when it is too long. Where the fall covering was staid manner, this should be lifted from the plants and the coarsest taken away for your compost pile and all small or finer particles placed between the plants and later when the soil is in to work in this can be spaded under. Always for this purpose use a spade fork, and dig pretty close to the plants and as deep as the space between them will admit. Always apply manure in the spring, digging it in to the soil when the first spading is done and later more can be very beneficially applied which will act as a mulch and will help keep the soil loose.

After the middle of May the soil should be stirred or hoed at least every ten days and, if we have heavy rains, as soon thereafter as the condition of the soil will permit. This not only keeps the soil from forming a crust but destroys the weeds before they take the nourishment out of the soil that the plants should have.

Annals in Between.

A garden planted entirely of perennials will find itself shy of bloom after the first abundant flowering period is over. For instance, when the iris, Peonies, Delphiniums, Lychins, Campanula, Madium, Lillium Candidum, Hollyhocks, etc., are gone, such gardens will have lost much of their brilliancy. It is the more noticeable then because many of the conspicuous beauties flower at about the same time. Then when the Phloxes, Arterisias, Rudbeckias, Salvias, Azaures and others begin to flower the gap is again partly filled up. So if it is the desire to have an abundance of flowers at all times, both for cutting and well as for adornment, I should advise planting perennials a sufficient distance apart to admit of planting annuals and summer flowering bulbs between them, which distance in the case of large beds or borders should be from two to four feet, in small beds on a lawn or which is surrounded by paths a little closer is not impracticable.

Those who like to grow their own annuals can now make the first sowing of asters, Lilies, balsams, pelonias, or anything to their liking which can be transplanted out into the open later. This can be done by using small wooden trays into which holes have been bored for drainage, or earthen pans such as those for cutting seed, well as for placing them in a sunny window or your house (when hotbeds or cold frames covered with sash are not available) because if allowed to come up in a dark place they grow long, spindly and tender and are very likely to damp off. The sowing of a few annual seeds every two or three weeks thereafter until July first and planting some gladioli, geranias and monardellas at about the same intervals beginning with the gladioli about May first and planting between such perennials as will be out of bloom and cut down later will furnish a profusion of bloom in the garden until late in the fall or until the frost cuts them off.

Starting of Seedlings.

About May first the seeds should be sown in a little spot of ground that is called a seed bed out in the open. Select a sunny and preferably a protected or sheltered place. As the season advances and the sun gets stronger the soil into which these seeds are sown should be shaded until the little plants poke their noses through the soil. Then when the third or fourth leaf, transplant them into another bed placing them from two to three inches apart, not very shading them for a day or two if the sun shines during this operation. And then when they have again grown so as to completely cover the ground they should be planted in their permanent quarters. There are a few very lovely flowers that we cannot well afford to be without in a well regulated garden that, however, do not take kindly to being transplanted; some of which are poppies, nigella, camphor, variegata and centauria or sweet sultans, and such are therefore better sown where they are to remain.

In small gardens or where the space will admit of only a few plants I believe it to be much more satisfactory and a great deal cheaper to buy the plants than to try raising them from seeds unless you are remunerated by the pleasure you get out of doing it. When sowing seeds, whether indoors or out, it is necessary to have the soil well pulverized by screening through a fine sieve and then sowing seeds in drills from four to six inches apart, covering them according to the size of the seeds. Fine seeds should not be covered with more than just enough soil to hide them or twice the depth of the size of the seed. Nasturtiums, sweet peas or all large seeds should be sown deeper and covered with from two to three inches of soil and in the case of sweet peas four inches is better, and avoid planting on a hard surface.

The trench for sweet peas should also not be less than twelve inches deep, with from three to four inches of well decayed manure in the bottom.

Watering.

All plants after being transplanted should receive a quantity of water sufficient to wet the soil immediately around them and enough to go into the soil below or under the roots.

This will require at least two waterings in the manner described as follows: Use a watering pot with the hose removed, or if a hose is used it should be without the nozzle and the water applied moderately slow or without any force to avoid washing. Where plants have been grown from seed and transplanted as before mentioned it is not necessary to wait until the sun is in the west to plant in permanent quarters, for it can be done in the morning or midday with just as good results. I am of the opinion that amateur gardeners are as likely to water the plants in gardens too much as they are to water them not enough. Plants should receive only as much water as to keep the soil moderately moist after the first copious watering given after transplanting. To keep soaking the plants every day will not only give you weak stems and consequently poor flowers but you are unconsciously inviting all kinds of fungi and rust for attack. Plants need water when they are thirsty and they are most thirsty when in active growth. So when watering is done give enough to wet the soil thoroughly and let it give any more until the plants need it. I should advise against the general use of a lawn sprinkler in a garden, particularly when a promiscuous watering is done; first, because it is not easy to determine the quantity of water that is supplied to plants by it; second, plants that do not require water or very little get just as much as those that are crying for it. To illustrate, when the Delphiniums and others have done flowering and are cut back in preparation to flower again they are in a semi dormant state for a short time and are far better off without water or a very little until they again make another start.

So I should advise watering the plants individually as they require it and not to soak the whole bed or garden for that is what a lawn sprinkler will do if given a chance.

In a protracted spell of dry weather when the hot south winds seem to draw all the life out of the plants and the foliage, the sprinkler can be used to very good advantage once or twice a week in addition to the regular watering. It can be substituted for what nature is failing to supply. This watering, particularly in mid-summer, should be done in late afternoon or evening so that the plants receive all the benefits before evaporation takes place the next day.

To be successful in the growing of plants after having paid the required attention to soil, etc., it is absolutely necessary to love the work in connection with it as well as the expected result—the flowers the plants bring forth. There can be no true friendship between man and man unless there are many things in common and unless a relative sympathetic feeling exists between the gardener and his plants, whether he be a professional or an amateur, any amount of work will not bring the best result, because it could not be given with the same thought and tender care. So where love for cultivating plants is natural, as is the sympathetic feeling that exists between a cal gardener and his work, the plants respond because they have their needs administered to in the right way.

When the real gardener passes through his greenhouse or garden and notices a plant in need of water or one that has fallen over for lack of proper support, he would no more pass it by without administering to its wants than a mother would pass her child when in distress without her tender and loving assistance. Gardening is an excellent educator in patience and perseverance. The more we do it (if the work is to our liking) the more interested we become in it, and the more pleasure we get from its results.

To beginners I would say grow only a few plants and take proper care of them until you have acquired a taste for this charming and most beautiful of recreations. Do not get buoyed up with anything but the truth, namely, that enthusiasm at the start and neglect afterward can have only one result—which is failure.

I can not refrain at this time to speak of the numberless novelties put before us every year, with enticing descriptions and distracting colored plates, some of which are indeed very meritorious and should belong to gardens whose space will admit of quantities. But too often have I found that they mostly are not much of an improvement over older varieties already cultivated. Novelties as a general thing are expensive and when we buy them we give them a little better place, if possible, and that is better than position, more thought and more careful attention. We go to magnificent flower shows and see roses, carnations, chrysanthemums and in fact everything else worth while for a garden, but we see them not as they would grow in your garden, but as they were especially grown for exhibition by experts. I get a great deal of amusement when I am at these exhibitions out of the questions I hear asked of the attendants, for instance, "What is the name of that rose? Will it grow like that out of the bush? See it bloom all summer? Is it perfectly hardy, etc." Where my amusement comes in is that the answers are invariably in the affirmative, and correctly so. They will grow just like them, if they get the same treatment as did those on exhibition. There is, however, a great disadvantage in growing roses in the open where we have no control over the elements. When it rains too much, we can not stop it. When it is too cool, we can not apply heat. When it is hot, they must endure it. Whereas, in a greenhouse all these things are under control for at least six months in the year. For that reason roses and the like are, as a general thing, much more beautiful and more perfect when grown under glass.

Spraying With Insecticides.

In looking through some catalogues recently I counted almost as many spraying materials as there are varieties of Heinz pickles. No doubt they are all good, but the insecticides will kill one kind of insect does very little or no harm to another. My experience is that for aphids, black or green, something with a nicotine basis is best. For the rose beetle, arsenate of lead is good, for blight, mildew or rust fungus or a new spraying material which we have used with excellent results called Suleo V B.

This is the best thing to destroy mildew, rust and other fungi. We have lately used it also to keep all kinds of aphids in check. I believe it is of as much importance to properly apply what we use and to begin spraying as a prevention rather than a cure, as it is the kind we use. A whisk broom is not a good thing to use, but perhaps better than nothing, because with it the spraying material can not be applied on the under side of the leaves as well, where the insects mostly are. There are several spraying syringes on the market for this purpose, some of which can be bought for fifty cents that will answer very well for all purposes in a small garden, because with them more effective work can be done.

My advice is to supply yourselves with a syringe or sprayer and begin your attack on the insects just as soon as the roses and other plants start growing, and keep it up once or twice a week until the plants have flowered or the growth matured. After that once in ten days is likely to be often enough. We have started with the beginning of spring work and followed up with the necessary work to be done in the summer and now comes the autumn and winter preparations in the garden. As soon as plants have finished flowering and the stalks begin drying up or are cut down by the frost remove them by cutting them close to the ground. If pulled off or broken, injury is likely to come to the crowns, which form just above the roots, for another season's bloom. Trimming of Plants. Shrubby plants like the tree peonies, caryopteris or blue spiraea and others often planted between perennials should be trimmed only to make them snappy. Roses, too, should never be trimmed in this latitude in the fall. It has been my experience that they winter much better. Then, too, the long shoots can be pulled over and covered with soil to hold them down to prevent them from a continual thawing and freezing. It is best not to do any covering until the latter part of November or December, depending entirely on the weather. There should first be at least two or three inches of frost in the ground, then about four inches of coarse manure or whatever material that is available should be placed directly over the plants. If the covering is put on before the ground is frozen the field mice, etc., will establish headquarters in your garden, and feed and have a general good time on what your prospects should be in the next season. And later as the weather gets colder another covering of the same thickness should be put, not only over the plants, but covering the entire bed. This is usually all the protection perennials need. But never use leaves because they lay too close or solid over the plants and I have found that the water from the decaying leaves is injurious to some perennials and bulbs. Protection During Winter. All evergreen shrubs, especially Rhododendrons, Kalmia (Mountain Laurel) should have evergreen branches placed in the ground between them and over their heads to protect them from the winter sun, but should also have the ground well mulched to prevent deep freezing, because through the roots the leaves get the necessary supply of moisture during the winter as well as in summer. Have you ever wondered why your plants don't grow, and the flowers they furnish are not as fine as they were in some other years even though they had the same attention? The principal reason for this is the condition of the weather and its effects on the things we plant. Take for example last year. I do not recall a summer when the weather was so much against vegetation generally. Up to about July 6th, it was cold and wet. After that it was hot and wet until well into the fall and what was not hindered from growing by these conditions was attacked by fungi, rust and myriads of insects which usually follow such unnatural conditions. So do what we may, if the elements are against us, our efforts can not bring much result. But instead of being discouraged at such times we must be optimistic and look forward with hope that another year will bring us a favorable conditions for it.

Why should they? They should be encouraged and stimulated by example by their older brothers and sisters and particularly by their parents. The ground is here and I believe most of its available. There are hundreds of lots within the city limits that are allowed to grow nothing but a luxuriant crop of weeds. If all this ground and that in the backyards which were not producing anything heretofore were plowed and planted with corn, potatoes, cabbage, etc., this year it not much more than a half crop was the result of this effort in addition to what is regularly produced, Kingston, instead of buying potatoes this fall could sell some of its less industrious neighboring cities. From an economic sense alone, what a fine thing this would be, but then to my mind there is much more to it than that. It would teach the children to do something useful and be a good lesson in efficiency and industry and that it is not a disgrace to work that nobody but the poor children work, and then only out of necessity.

A Useful Recreation. I believe that when children are taught to do something useful from the very beginning, they make more useful and consequently better citizens when they grow up and I believe what I have said could be accomplished and still give the boys all the time they need for baseball, kite flying and other recreations from which they would get no return. Gardening is no harder work than most of the recreations indulged in by the young people of our city and they therefore should not be told that it is work, but only a healthful exercise and once they become interested they will need no other encouragement than the reward that follows intelligent, faithful application.

Makes and Fills Bags.

An inventor has used the sausage machine as his model in devising a machine which makes and fills bags at the same time.

Protection During Winter.

All evergreen shrubs, especially Rhododendrons, Kalmia (Mountain Laurel) should have evergreen branches placed in the ground between them and over their heads to protect them from the winter sun, but should also have the ground well mulched to prevent deep freezing, because through the roots the leaves get the necessary supply of moisture during the winter as well as in summer. MILTON

Milton, April 5.—The suffrage vaudeville given last Friday in Woolsey Hall was a great success. The entertainment opened with "The Fairy Shoon," a little play written by Miss Grace T. Hallock when at Mt. Holyoke College. The staging was very pretty. Miss Hallock took the minstrel's part, the little Misses Gladys Taber and Joyce Preston. Leprechaun and the fairy child. This play is distinguished by being played first in Spain. A girl friend and also a student at Holyoke introduced it in that country. A company of about twenty young girls and boys were transformed into a lively and exceedingly attractive minstrel troupe. Their songs, jokes, dancing and band music were remarkably well done. The male quartet by M. A. Northrup, Russell Hallock, William Donaldson, and Ambrose Bunick; solos by Miss Evelyn Northrup and Miss Winifred McManus, and duet by Alsdorf and Northrup, and jig by Miss de Leon were great. In fact, every one in the company did wonderfully well. Director Taber won loud applause for the lively manner in which he led the "band." The Misses Hallock and de Leon surely deserved much credit for making the affair such a grand success. The net proceeds were $30. The orchestra, Knud Dalgreen, Peter and Fred McManus were very entertaining. The affair was so pleasing that they are asked to give it in other places. We may also hear them again in Milton for the benefit of some other good cause.

Dudley Palmer has returned to Folly Farm from New York city. Mr. and Mrs. Ward Crowell and family are moving to Garverville.

Nicholas Crane will soon take possession of the Goodwin place. Mrs. Noah Travis of West Park visited her father, Delbert Warren, recently.

The funeral of Thomas McManus, Sr., who died on Thursday last, was held in St. James' Church on Monday morning where a requiem mass was offered for the repose of his soul.

Mrs. Stinson, who has been in New York city for medical treatment, has returned to her home somewhat improved.

Miss Edna B. Dodd of Newark, N. J., is at her summer home here for Easter vacation.

At noon Tuesday, March 27, the Chalmers was stopped at the starting point. It had gone 586.8 miles through Chicago's densest traffic. The motor had never been stopped. Nothing but high gear was used.

To prove conclusively Chalmers flexibility on high gear, the low and intermediate gears were removed from the transmission.

The car was a standard Chalmers seven-passenger touring model, complete with standard body, top and full equipment. The same model you can buy today.

An average of slightly over 14 miles per gallon of gasoline was attained, an excellent example of Chalmers economy.

586.8 miles, through the famous congested Chicago "loop" district, is a wonderful feat. This performance on high gear is even more wonderful. It is without an equal.

It is an endorsement of the motor. It proves Chalmers reliability. It demonstrates Chalmers cooling. It shows Chalmers flexibility and perfect control. It is a new achievement.

A condensed summary of the signed certificate issued by the Contest Board of the American Automobile Association, under whose supervision the test was made, is reproduced below.

THIS IS TO CERTIFY that the Chalmers seven-passenger car above mentioned was a fully equipped stock car. It was driven for 24 hours through Chicago traffic. Only high gear was used. The motor was never stopped during the run. The mileage obtained was 586.8 miles. The gasoline consumption was an average of slightly over 14 miles per gallon.

Chairman Contest Board, American Automobile Association.

Some Other Chalmers AchievementsChicago to New York

On June 7, 1916, a Chalmers stock car shattered all existing road records between Chicago and New York, making the run of 1047 miles in 31 hours. The best previous time was made by a Packard driven by E. C. Patterson, whose time was 35 hours 43 minutes.

Giant's Despair Mountain Climb

On October 6th, 1916, a Chalmers captured the free-for-all event at the Wilkes-Barre hill climb on Giant's Despair mountain, winning the $1,000 Hollenbeck Trophy and defeating four 12-cylinder cars, several well-known racing creations and many of the highest-priced and highest-powered American cars.

Wins Pike's Peak Climb

August 11, 1916, a Chalmers carried off first honors in the 230 cubic inch class on the terrific grades of Pike's Peak in Colorado. Its time was within a few seconds of much higher-powered, and specially built machines.

Detroit to Indianapolis

On June 12, 1916, the Chalmers set a new record over the roads between Detroit and Indianapolis, 365 miles, making the trip in eight hours, 23 minutes.

Atlanta to Chattanooga

June 24, 1916, a Chalmers lowered all records between Atlanta and Chattanooga. The distance of 125 miles was covered in 3 hours, 53 minutes. This is faster than the time of the Dixie Flyer, the fastest railroad train of the south.

Dallas to San Antonio

Another famous train—the Katy Limited—was beaten by a Chalmers between Dallas and San Antonio. The Chalmers made the run in 9 hours and 22 minutes, 1 hour and 33 minutes faster than train time.

Father Terpening, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Myron Terpening of Highland, was quite badly burned about the face Tuesday morning as she was removing a tea kettle full of boiling water from the stove. A doctor was immediately summoned, who found that the removing of the clothing, which was necessary for the proper care of the burn, took the flesh with it. The little girl suffered intense agony, but was reported this morning as resting comfortably.

ONE CENT A WORD ADVS. BRING RESULTS

HOUSE DEBATES WAR RESOLUTION

By Telegraph to The Freeman.

Washington, April 5.—A sensational feature of the debate in the house this afternoon on the Flood-Martin state of war resolution was a challenge by Representative Cooper of Wisconsin of President Wilson's assertion that American lives were lost when the Sussex was imperilled. This statement was not so, Cooper declared. He also defended the McLenore resolution, which would have kept Americans off armed ships.

The debate dragged in the early stages. A sensation was caused by the statement of close friends of Claude Kitchin the majority leader, that he "very probably" would vote against the state of war resolution. Kitchin said that he would make his position plain when the time arrived for him to talk. A number of the administration leaders made it plain that if Kitchin votes against the bill they will urge the advisability of having him replaced as floor leader by a member who is entirely in sympathy with the president's policies.

Before Representative Cooper was reached an impassioned appeal for the legislation was made by Representative B. P. Harrison of Mississippi, who is recognized as the administration spokesman on the floor.

Cooper, the ranking member of the Republican minority on the foreign affairs committee, at the outset of his speech read a letter which, he said, came from Secretary of State Lansing stating that no American lives were lost when the Sussex was torpedoed in the English Channel.

GERMANY STRONGER THAN AT ANY TIME

British Chief of Staff and Winston Churchill Make Ominous Declarations as to Strength of Allies.

By Telegraph to The Freeman.

London, April 5.—Ominous declarations on the war situation were completely overshadowed today by the good news from America. General Robertson, chief of staff, in announcing that England needs 500,000 more men before July, said that Germany has trained and equipped 1,000,000 more troops and that she is stronger now than at any other time since the war began. Former First Lord of the Admiralty Winston Churchill said that the war situation for the allies had not been so serious since the autumn of 1914 and that the result of the war would not be foretold, but for the aid which the United States will bring.

The government has decreed one meatless day a week, beginning April 15. The meatless day in London will be Tuesday, outside of London, Wednesday.

GRAPE SUIT TRIED.

Passmore and Masceilli tried at to Deal in Grapes.

The action brought by Louis K. Passmore against Goremia Masceilli was tried before Judge Jenkins and a jury in the county court this morning.

Both parties reside in the town of Marlborough, where Mr. Passmore is a large grape grower and Masceilli is a manufacturer of wine. For a number of years Masceilli bought large quantities of grapes from Mr. Passmore, and last year contracted as usual for a large supply.

The action was brought originally in Justice's court in the town of Marlborough to recover about $40, being a balance due on grapes which were delivered under the contract. Masceilli put in a counterclaim for $200 before the justice of the peace, which is the amount to which a litigant is limited in Justice's court. Claiming that he had been damaged by that extent through Passmore's failure to live up to his contract, instead of delivering the grapes contracted for, he had sold his supply to another buyer who had offered more for them.

On the trial of the case in the justice's court, judgment was rendered in favor of Masceilli and against Passmore for $188. An appeal was taken and the trial of the case in the county court resulted, in the county court Masceilli amended his counterclaim and fixed his damages at $200 for which amount he could not sue in the justice's court.

Most of the witnesses were examined through an interpreter, and testimony was given that sales of the Passmore grapes had been made toward the end of the season at $18 a ton, which was an advance of $3 a ton over the amount Masceilli contracted to pay. It is claimed that Passmore had given the grapes sold at the advanced price to his son, John Passmore, the previous April. Masceilli's case was concluded at 12:15 o'clock and court adjourned until 1:30 o'clock this afternoon. John Passmore appeared for Passmore with Frank W. Brooks of counsel, Alexander Johnson of Marlborough appeared for Masceilli.
